Release of 15 Political Prisoners Demanded

U.S. Ambassador Abducted in Rio

From AP-Reuters

RIO DE JANEIRO — Communist raiders kidnapped U.S. Ambassador Charles Burke Elbrick Thursday and demanded that Brazil release 15 political prisoners as the price for his life.

Four gunmen, some of them bearded, ambushed Elbrick's limousine on a Rio street and drove off with him in a station wagon. A report said he was chloroformed.

A political manifesto left behind by the abductors said the 61-year-old Elbrick was seized because he was "the symbol of exploitation."

* * *

The document said Elbrick's life "is in the hands of the dictatorship" — meaning the military government of Brazil.

The kidnappers said Elbrick will be executed if the government does not accept their demands within 48 hours — by Saturday afternoon.

The demanded that the 15 political prisoners be flown to Algeria, Chile or Mexico where they would seek political asylum.

* * *

The kidnappers forced Elbrick from his limousine as he rode back from lunch at his residence to the downtown embassy offices.

Police sources said four men armed with guns cut off the Cadillac limousine with a small Volkswagen.

They took Elbrick to a Volkswagen station wagon and fled leaving behind the embassy driver, a homemade bomb that did not go off, and the ransom note.

* * *

The abduction took place a few blocks from the ambassador's residence and a large military police barracks that is heavily guarded.

The manifesto said the two signing organizations — the MR-8 and the National Liberation Action — would no longer tolerate alleged tortures, beatings and killings of their members at the hands of authorities.

* * *

"Now it's an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," the manifesto said.

In San Clemente, Calif., the Western White House said President Nixon is concerned over the kidnapping and is following developments closely.

Back in Year of Big Drought . . .

LONDON (UPI) — Remember that first drink? If you do, there's a possibility you may be an alcoholic, according to the British National Council of Alcoholism.

A report Thursday by the council said one of the best ways to spot an alcoholic is by whether he remembers his first drink.

Persons not dependent on alcohol rarely remember the first drink, "even if it was stolen from their father when they were 13," the report added.

Strachan for Chief? 'You Can't Go Back'

● Leftists seek more radical federal NDP. Page 39

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cowichan - Malahat MLA Robert Strachan Thursday ruled out out any chance of returning to the New Democratic Party provincial leadership he held for 13 years prior to his resignation in April.

Mr. Strachan, 55, said in an interview he would also refuse to accept leadership of the party in the Legislature in the wake of leader Tom Berger's defeat in the Aug. 27 provincial election.

* * *

His comments came during an NDP caucus meeting here attended by 10 of the party's 11 MLAs. The session, first since the election, was called to discuss the political future of Mr. Berger, Mr. Strachan's successor.

"You can't go back, I've already been leader of the party," said Mr. Strachan. "I'm not in the running for the House leadership—if I allowed my name to stand I would be considered a possible future leader of the party and I am not."

* * *

Mr. Berger, a 36-year-old lawyer who was defeated by a Social Crediter in the Vancouver-Burrard riding on election day, said that he has turned down offers by "some MLAs" to resign, which would enable him to try for a Legislature seat in a byelection.

"I have told them I don't intend to act on their offer," said Mr. Berger. "They have been elected to do a job and I think they should do it."

No decision on the fate of the NDP leadership was announced. Mr. Berger said he would decide whether to stay on or resign "probably later this month." He did not identify the MLAs who volunteered to resign.

With Mr. Strachan out of the running, three candidates remain for the NDP House leadership. Considered the most likely successor to Mr. Berger is Coquitlam MLA Dave Barrett, a 38-year-old social worker.

Mr. Barrett, runner-up to Mr. Berger at the NDP's April leadership convention, has said he's waiting to see what Mr. Berger will do before making any announcement of his own plans.

Other names figuring prominently in NDP strategy sessions are Alex Macdonald, 50-year-old NDP deputy leader, and Bob Williams, 36, who finished a distant third at the leadership convention.

Cong Call Ceasefire To Mourn Ho

● Hanoi rivals disagree only on means to end war. Page 5

From AP, UPI

SAIGON — The Viet Cong announced today that a three-day ceasefire in mourning for North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh will start at 1 a.m. Saigon time, next Monday. Initial indications were that United States and South Vietnamese forces would honor it.

An announcement broadcast by the Viet Cong's clandestine radio offered safe conduct to any South Vietnamese and American troops who wanted to enter Communist-held areas in the South to participate in funeral observances. The radio said the Viet Cong would do everything possible to protect any such mourners.

END PRESUMED

The ceasefire presumably would end at 1 a.m. Thursday, Saigon time.

Hanoi has given no official date for the funeral, but Cuban and North Korea radio broadcasts said Ho will be buried Wednesday.

Soviet and Communist Chinese leaders will probably meet face to face for the first time in 4½ years at the state rites.

NEW ATTACKS

Meanwhile, Communist troops staged a new wave of attacks throughout South Vietnam late Thursday and early today by shelling at least 66 targets with rockets and mortars and hurling ground assaults against U.S. bases north of Saigon.

Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai arrived in Hanoi Thursday with two other Chinese officials to attend the funeral, and diplomatic sources in Moscow said Premier Alexei Kosygin will fly to Hanoi today.

The arrival of high-ranking delegations from China and the Soviet Union will present Hanoi with a tricky protocol problem in managing the emissaries of

Tanks Rushed To Libyan City

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Libyan troops and tanks occupied Libya's second largest city Thursday, Libyan air force planes patrolled over oil installations and one report said a new revolutionary leader has emerged in the murky post-coup political situation.

The North African country's borders remained sealed. Since a military junta deposed King Idris I last Monday, Tripoli radio has been the main source of information, augmented by other Arab news agencies.

Tripoli radio announced troops and tanks entered Bengasi, 700 miles from the capital, "without meeting any resistance." It gave no explanation, but Bengasi is the capital of Cyrenaica province, where desert tribes are known to be fanatically loyal to the deposed king.

PLANES GROUNDED

Diplomatic sources in Tunis also reported British infantry training exercises in the Cyrenaican Desert have been cancelled. All planes at United States and British air bases in Libya have been grounded since the coup.

The Libyan news agency reported air force planes were flying constant patrols over the country's oil installations after anti-British demonstrations broke out Wednesday night.

Egypt's Middle East news agency said the demonstrations followed reports that King Idris had asked for British military help to try to regain his throne.

Israeli Raid Kills Five In Lebanon

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli troops crossed into southern Lebanon today and raided a small village, the army said.

Four Israeli soldiers were wounded and at least five Lebanese were killed in the 1½-hour raid, which began at midnight Thursday night, a spokesman said.

The army said 12 buildings in the village of Haida, two miles inside Lebanon, were destroyed.

The invading force had instructions not to harm civilians, but apparently it encountered some opposition.

Federation Chiefs Call Emergency Session

Oil Strike Move Splits Labor

VANCOUVER (CP)—A simmering dispute within the British Columbia labor movement over conduct of the 15-week oil workers strike boiled over here Thursday.

The B.C. Federation of Labor called its 30-member executive council into emergency session Thursday night to discuss the action of the Oil, Atomic and Chemical Workers Union in defying the federation by appearing before the B.C. Mediation Commission in a bid to end the strike against six major oil companies in the Lower Mainland.

And the oil union, a federation affiliate, sent a telegram to the parent Canadian Labor Congress demanding that the federation be instructed to stop interfering in the union's autonomous affairs.

The federation has ordered its member oganization to refrain from appearing before the commission as a protest against B.C. Labor legislation.

Earlier Thursday, the independent Teamsters Union announced it was delaying earlier announced plans to ban what it called the "hot" products of the six companies—Imperial, Shell, Standard, Home, Texaco and Gulf — pending the outcome of the commission hearings.

Ray Haynes, federation secretary - treasurer said the teamsters' action is "calculated to bolster the sagging mediation commission" and "aid the Social Credit government."

The federation supported the New Democratic Party during the recent B.C. general election.

Mr. Haynes said that all through the strike Teamster drivers had been using hot fuel in their trucks and had been delivering hot gasoline through an arrangement with non-union drivers.

* * *

Last week the Teamsters announced its members would not operate any equipment using hot fuel from the struck companies.

Thursday, Teamster President Ed Lawson said the edict was being withdrawn for the time being "in view of the publicly - announced intention of the oilworkers union to appear and present its case to the mediation commission."

He said the action had been requested by the oilworkers.

* * *

The commission hearing was adjourned Thursday to Monday after R. T. Philp, representing the oilworkers, said the union was not ready to proceed.

A spokesman for the companies said the firms would agree to the adjournment provided the union guaranteed to cease illegal picketing and stop incidents such as rock-

Bernadette Says Barricades Stay

BELFAST (AP) — Bernadette Devlin returned to Londonderry's Bogside Thursday after her American tour and announced: "The barricades stay up until the (Northern Ireland) government comes down."

Bernadette was smuggled in from the Irish Republic, avoiding the police and military whom, she says, may want to arrest her.

In a bar inside the barricaded Bogside the 22-year-old Roman Catholic civil rights activist told reporters that money she raised in the United States will be available for the relief of families made homeless in last month's Catholic-Protestant riots as soon as it can be transferred from American banks.

two mutually hostile countries which also are its major allies.

The last time top Soviet and Chinese leaders met was in February, 1965, when Chou held talks with Kosygin in Peking.

North Vietnam Thursday began a week of mourning for the 79-year-old "Uncle Ho" and Hanoi radio announced that a public ceremony will be held in the capital's Ba Dinh Square after the late president has lain in state.

PEACE TALKS

During the ceasefire, South Vietnamese and American and other combined forces soldiers could particiqate in mourning ceremonies if they went individually, did not carry weapons and did not engage in spying.

In Paris, Thursday's session of the deadlocked Vietnam peace talks was cancelled at North Vietnam's request. Ambassador Xuan Thuy, chief of Hanoi's delegation, said Ho's death will bring no change in North Vietnam's stand, which among other things calls for withdrawal of all U.S. troops from South Vietnam.

In Saigon, President Nguyen Van Thieu and Premier Tran Thien Khiem avoided speculation on what member of Hanoi's political hierarchy might come to power.

Thieu said Ho's death would influence the internal situation and the question was whether "these henchmen of Russian and Chinese Communists" will continue the fight in the South.

The Associated Press said U.S. and South Vietnamese officials in Saigon expect a triumvirate to emerge in the next few months. They predict it will consist of Le Duan, first secretary of the North Vietnamese Communist party; Premier Pham Van Dong, and Truong Chinh, chairman of the National Assembly.

Reuters news agency reported that Hanoi-watchers in Saigon viewed Le Duan's top ranking in the funeral committee as an indication he is apt to emerge as No. 1 man in Hanoi.

Analysts in Saigon believe Le Duan will assume Ho's mantle as party chairman and that elderly Vice-President Ton Duc Thang will be elected head of state when the National Assembly meets to vote for Ho's successor as president, Reuters said.

Should Le Duan emerge as top man, he would be able to maintain Ho's policy of striking a balance between China and Russia, Reuters quoted Saigon analysts as saying.

Although he favors Russia, he is not prepared to accept the dictates of either side, they added.

Labor Split Over Oil Strike

throwing, which he said, occurred in the last 24 hours.

Mr. Philp said instructions had gone out to picket captains to conduct only orderly, normal picketing during the hearings.

The commission hearing is the first held under the province's controversial Bill 33 Mediation Commission Act. The hearing was ordered by Labor Minister Leslie Peterson after attempts to mediate the dispute during the Labor Day weekend failed.

The oil workers seek a $1-an-hour pay increase and have rejected a 53-cent hourly package offered by the companies.

Meanwhile, Mr. Philp said Thursday it is "virtually impossible" to ensure that union members on a picket line steer clear of alcohol.

"How do you police something like that?" he asked.

Mr. Philp was commenting on the findings of a coroner's jury which investigated the death on Aug. 26 of OCAWU picket James Gordon Harvey.

Mr. Harvey, 43, of the Vancouver suburb of Port Coquitlam, died when struck by a truck outside the Shellburn refinery.

The inquest jury found that he had a blood alcohol reading of .16 at the time of his death and recommended that the union make sure its pickets do not work under the influence of alcohol.

Mr. Philp said that union members were aware prior to the accident that drinking and picket duty should not be combined.

He said, however, that attempting to enforce a no-drinking rule would be virtually impossible. "If a man wants to have a few beers at home first, how do you stop him?"

Sources in London said the British refused.

Most reports still identified Col. Saad Eddin Abbou Cheuireb as leader of the new military regime. But the Middle East news agency claimed he was Libya's new army chief of staff and not the chairman of the revolutionary council.

The agency carried an interview with the council chairman, who it said "wished to remain anonymous."

It quoted him as saying the new regime would follow a policy of "pan-Arab and pan-Islamic brotherhood and solidarity" and would introduce "genuine democracy, the people's democracy."

The unidentified chairman said Libya wants "mutual respect, equal treatment and non-interference in its domestic affairs from the outside world," the agency reported.

In the interview, he also said the coup was carried out by group called "the Organization of Free Unionist Officers," formed in 1966.

Tripoli radio announced that the Soviet Union had recognized the new regime, joining Egypt, Iraq, Sudan, Syria, Lebanon and East Germany. Another radio broadcast implied that Libya's new leaders considered themselves under Soviet protection.

Catholic streets in Belfast's Falls Road district, remained barricaded against the police and army and in state of virtual insurrection.

Bernadette said: "We have a list of legitimate demands. The granting of these demands involves the destruction of the government.

"We don't want it destroyed as an exercise in destruction but because it stands in the way of progress and social and economic security."

She complained that Britain's Home Secretary James Callaghan, on his peacemaking mission here last week, made no mention of repeal of the Special Powers Act which gives Northern Ireland's government rights of unlimited detention over Republicans allied to the neighboring regime in Dublin.

Despite her expressed fear of arrest if she comes into contact with British authority, Bernadette, youngest member of the British Parliament, said she soon will be back in London "making faces at (Prime Minister) Harold Wilson and calling him a coward."

Earlier, the British Army swooped on barricades blocking main traffic routes and tore them apart. Crowds gathered in the Catholic area of Monagh Road in Belfast and for the first time a direct clash between the population and the military seemed possible.

But the army, making a strong show of force with its men fully armed and ready for combat, held control.

It's Not the Water's Fault

Your Good Health

By G. T. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How frequently should one take tub baths? Isn't there something about "too much water" on the skin?

My girlfriend takes an average of 12 tub baths a week and she has a breaking out on her arm and on the thighs. Will you comment on this? — Mrs. A.T.

A daily bath or shower is reasonable; why your friend wants to soak about twice a day puzzles me, but maybe she has her reasons.

Excessive washing and sudsing — I guess there's such a word — can remove protective oils from the skin, making it vulnerable to irritation or infection. Skins vary a good deal in their tolerance to bathing.

But keep this in mind: It isn't the water, but rather the soap or detergent used in the bath, that is principally responsible for removing skin oils.

Just soaking in plain water 12 times a week isn't vrey likely to cause skin problems. If your friend uses a lot of lather, however, that could be drying her skin.

Or does she consistently use some sort of smellum or other bathtub materials to which she may have a sensitivity?

For readers in the older-age brackets, it is worth pointing out that older skins do not produce as much oil as younger ones, and excessive bathing, particularly soaping, can make the skin dryer than it should be. Itching often results.

I decline to condemn baths or cleanliness, but understanding the meaning of moderation can be a benefit to you.

□

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My wife went to the hospital for x-rays on account of backache. They found she had a cyst in the left kidney. Would medication of diet help, or does it require surgery? Her doctor said they would wait two months and X-ray again — M.M.

This is one of many conditions which can cause backache. Other symptoms can be headache and the pressure of a mass in the abdomen. There often is a high red blood cell count.

Diet and medication do not help cystic kidneys. The only treatment is surgery to empty large cysts. There may be one cyst or several (presence of multiple cysts is called poly-cystic kidney).

Periodic observation (as in your case) is necessary to determine when surgery is necessary.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If a person had a venereal disease 24 years ago and was treated for it, and then blood tests proved negative, could this same disease come back, or would it have to be picked up again by personal contact? — J.D.

It would have to be picked up through a new contact.

Special Group Still Studies Rhodesia Rift

LONDON (CP) — A seven-country working party, including Canada, met for about three hours Thursday to study a draft plan for tightening sanctions against Rhodesia.

Informants said no final decisions were reached and that the representatives decided to meet again, possibly in a week or so.

The working party was established by the Commonwealth sanctions committee last June with orders to meet urgently and report to the committee quickly on suggestions for further curbs against the white regime of Ian Smith.

However, after one or two meetings, the representatives decided there was a political limit to the practical measures that could be taken against Rhodesia and that the best course might be to demand that the United Nations eliminate existent loopholes.

The UN has already reported that a number of countries have failed to abide by the existing sanctions which include trade embargoes.

Working on the argument that UN members should be forced to obey the rules, the representatives began drafting a report of recommendations to the committee.

Informants said they had hoped the draft report would be approved at the Thursday meeting but some representatives apparently felt they needed more time.

Informants said that while the working party's report is likely to be strongly phrased, there is a realistic mood among representatives that their recommendations will have little damaging impact on the white regime in Salisbury.

The Israeli air force Thursday stepped up its strikes at Jordanian army positions believed to be supporting infiltrating Arab guerrillas.

An army spokesman announced in Tel Aviv that Israeli warplanes twice crossed the Jordan River to bomb and strafe Jordanian outposts Thursday. The action brought to three the number of raids within the past 24 hours.

The army spokesman said the first Thursday raid was launched after two Israeli soldiers were killed and another injured in an encounter with Arab guerrillas in the Damiyah Bridge area, 26 miles north of the Dead Sea.

Raiding Israeli planes also struck at Jordanian artillery emplacements that were said to have shelled Israeli encampments in the Maoz Haim area, 60 miles northeast of Tel Aviv.

In Amman, Jordan, military spokesmen confirmed that Israeli aircraft raked Jordanian positions three times Thursday.

He said one soldier was killed and three others injured in two raids on Damiyah Bridge.

Two Israeli jets pounded Jordanian forces earlier in the Al-Karkar area 15 miles south of the Sea of Galilee, the spokesman said.

Glibness of Soviet Defector Makes Britons Suspicious

LONDON (UPI) — Members of Scotland Yard's special branch Thursday questioned a mysterious Russian who turned up Wednesday in Liverpool saying he wanted to defect from the Soviet Union.

The Russian identified himself as Vladislav Davydenko, 30. He refused other personal details on grounds it could hurt his relatives in the Soviet Union. The circumstances of his sudden appearance in Liverpool and the glibness of his story caused British authorities to treat him with extreme caution.

'OUT OF SKY'

"Say I dropped out of the sky in Liverpool," Davydenko told the Daily Telegraph newspaper after contacting its office in Liverpool.

He said he stowed away on a Russian ship to reach England and that he represented the Free Republican Party of Russia, an anti-Communist underground organization.

Davydenko gave no details of his voyage other than to say he had eaten nothing in 13 days. He appeared to speak no English. But he did not explain how he made his way from a Russian freighter to a cafe in downtown Liverpool owned by a Russian-speaking Yugoslav.

HOME OFFICE

He told the cafe owner, Djordje Karakusevic, he wanted to get in touch with either the British Home Office, the Daily Telegraph, or Anatoly Kuznetsov, a Soviet writer who defected July 28.

Kuznetsov, who was on an officially-sponsored visit to London, sought and won asylum through an acquaintance on the Daily Telegraph.

Davydenko said he was not a Soviet agent in Britain to "get" Kuznetsov.

BLUE JACKET

The Russian was dressed in a blue corduroy jacket, checked shirt and grey slacks when Karakusevic noticed him drinking coffee at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

He told the Yugoslav he was a Ukrainian who had been living in Leningrad. Davydenko said he had held several jobs but trained most recently to be a dental assistant.

Karakusevic said the Russian had the appearance of an educated man who had done manual work.

IN SIX DAYS

Davydenko said he would leave Britain in six days after meeting his "contacts." The Russian did not say where he would go or how he would support himself.

"Nobody asked Lenin how he was going to live when he left Russia or if he had any money," the Russian said. "Lenin left Russia many times before the revolution to carry out his political work and nobody considers him a traitor."

Davydenko said he would return to the Soviet Union when another party ruled the country and there were free elections.

SIMPLE PEOPLE

The Russian gave no details of the party he said he belonged to other than that members were intellectuals and "simple Russian people" seeking "the truth."

Davydenko said he would give no personal details because he feared the Soviet secret police would trace him and his friends.

"Each one of them would become a marked man, I can guarantee you that," Davydenko said after refusing to answer personal questions.

Nasser Gambit Foiled

CAIRO — The Arab summit meeting here, despite the many testimonials to the cause of Pan-Arab solidarity, was a reflection of Arab disunity rather than unity.

And the conference turned out to be a personal disappointment for the host, Egypt's President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

HEAVY CENSORING

This downbeat reading of the mini-summit is the prevailing one here among knowledgeable Egyptian and western sources — but it is a view that because of heavy censorship here may not have been transmitted outside.

"Nasser really wanted Bakr," said one high-placed source. "Instead he got Numeiri."

The reference was to the fact that the president of Iraq, Ahmed Hassan Al Bakr, chose not to attend the conference and at the last minute the new head of the Sudanese revolution command council, Maj. Gen. Jaafar Numeiri, decided to invite himself.

SUMMIT REDUCED

Numeiri joined Nasser, King Hussein of Jordan, President Noureddin Attassi of Syria and Iraq's number three man, Lt.-Gen. Saleh Mahdi Ammash.

The reduced summit meeting was what was left of Nasser's original call for a meeting of the heads of state of all Arab nations.

This plan, seconded by Hussein, was torpedoed last week when the Arab foreign ministers meeting here instead decided to call for an Islamic summit to discuss the fire at Jerusalem's Al Aksa mosque.

OUT FOXED

According to diplomats here, Saudi Arabia's King Feisal, who had opposed Nasser's Arab summit plan, outfoxed him by pushing for the meeting of all Moslem countries.

Thus this week's foreshortened conference was begin referred to as a "mini-summit" and even a "micro-mini-summit."

President Bakr announced he could not attend but many observers here attributed this to a "diplomatic" illness.

Anti-Pollution Plan

EVEN AFTER a discussion of the proposed Canada Water Act with the federal minister responsible for it, Mr. Otto Lang, British Columbia Resources Minister Ray Williston finds a need for further clarification before the plan can be considered by the provincial cabinet. The proposed legislation is described as a federal government attempt to cut through jurisdictional tangles with the provinces to deal with water pollution, but that the attempt is likely to succeed is certainly not crystal clear.

The Ottawa plan provides for designation by federal and provincial governments of "water quality management areas," where there is a significant national interest, in which management agencies would administer anti-pollution programs. It provides for federal action where co-operation cannot be obtained from provinces, and it includes the building of sewage treatment plants with the costs recovered by charging industries and municipalities for their use.

Mr. Williston sees difficulty in dovetailing all the responsibilities of provincial water and pollution authorities and "another set of administrative machinery" and he also was worried, although he says he has now been assured on this point by Mr. Lang, that management areas setting up different levels of control would result in endless confusion.

However, on the latter point it is interesting to note that the chief legal adviser to the federal resources department, speaking to the Canadian Bar Association convention, granted that different standards would apply in different regions. Asked about cases in which certain pollution levels were permitted in one part of Canada but barred in another, he said one of the principles of the federal program was that industry should not be able to avoid the cost of pollution control by locating in an area with no pollution problem. Industry should pay the cost of cleaning up its waste, he said, before it is dumped into waters anywhere in Canada.

If the Canada Water Act is to apply only to bodies of water of national significance, what can the federal government do to prevent industry from locating where provincial requirements are minimal?

Mr. Lang has stated that the proposed law relies heavily on co-operation with the provinces, and so it obviously does. It may prove not to cut through the federal-provincial jurisdictional tangles in any highly effective way. But as Mr. Williston has remarked, "there's a great deal of reason for us to proceed together and to proceed in a co-ordinated manner on the whole (water) problem."

Forecast: No Change

THE DEATH OF HO CHI MINH, the 79-year-old president of North Vietnam, is not likely to affect one way or another the policy of the administration at Hanoi. Not immediately in any event

Any hope that his passing might result in the moderation of terms demanded by North Vietnam for settlement of the problems of the divided country has little or no basis.

Although this fanatical, ruthless and audacious leader was the author of the aggressive policies of the government, his decisions were never questioned. They constitute a continuing directive to whoever may succeed him. There are no such people as "hawks" and "doves" among the hierarchy; there are no moderates, as the word is understood in the West. There are only dedicated, disciplined disciples, as fully committed as the old revolutionist was to the unification of Vietnam under communism.

From no single one of them can Saigon or Washington expect any suggestion of compromise.

It is not at all likely that in any rivalry for the leadership there will emerge differences of a nature to divide the country—as in the case of China, where factional disputes disrupted Mao Tse-tung's economic and political programs for so long.

In fact, the memory of the man who freed the country from the French colonial power is apt to inspire as great enthusiasm for his goal as did his living genius.

The one faint prospect for progress for the peace-seekers now centres on Tuesday's hint from Hanoi's Xuan Thuy that a speedup of United States troop withdrawals might break the deadlock at the Paris conversations.

But the chief negotiator for North Vietnam was talking to reporters at a diplomatic reception when he made the remark, and it is very doubtful that it indicated any change of policy.

Nevertheless, Henry Cabot Lodge has no alternative but to pursue the possibility in the hope of finding some firm formula.

Unhappily the chief of the American delegation will be well aware that he is probably chasing just another will-o'-the-wisp in the endless jungle of Vietnam.

A Boy from Ulster

AUTHORITIES IN ULSTER took time out from politics recently to welcome a personable young man who had arrived to unveil a plaque on a storefront in Portglenone, in County Antrim.

It was John Craig Eaton who had come to Portglenone, and the plaque marked the spot where his great-grandfather, Timothy, had served his apprenticeship more than 100 years ago before emigrating to Canada to found a multi-million dollar business.

There have been plenty of other young men from Ulster, and from all the British Isles, who in the past have made their mark in this country. But possibly no name is better known to Canadians than Timothy Eaton's.

The youngest of nine, he was born after his father died, and served a hard apprenticeship for five years, six days a week, sleeping in a cot under the shop counter.

When he emigrated he had £100 in his purse and in 1869 he and his brother James opened a little store in Toronto — strictly cash, in an age of barter and credit.

The extraordinary success of these young men, and of their continuing enterprise, may still serve as an inspiration not only to immigrants but to Canadians. Sometimes, one feels, they have need of it. Times were tough for Timothy Eaton, too, often enough.

Stanfield Accepts Risks — By FRASER KELLY

Minimum Annual Income Tories' Ultimate Aim Despite Opposition Within the Party

THE federal Conservative Party is now headed firmly and almost inevitably toward a policy of some form of minimum annual income for all Canadians.

The debate within party ranks will be convulsive but its conclusion is foregone — as long, that is, as Robert Stanfield is leader.

The whole handling of this issue is typical of Mr. Stanfield's leadership. Quietly, and with a minimum of fanfare, he is taking firm control of the levers of power, then using those levers to transform his party.

He first introduced the proposal in a speech in London, during the 1968 election campaign. His communication of the concept was so poor, and Prime Minister Trudeau's denunciation of the idea was so effective, that somehow it all came through to the public as just another election promise.

Mr. Stanfield was immediately placed on the defensive, and he spent much of the time in succeeding weeks trying to clarify his position.

But then, as now, he was convinced the principle was right. So he is pushing relentlessly ahead with sophistication and talent, and he is pulling the party with him. He knows the risk involved.

The western wing of the party is as adamantly opposed to the concept as it was to Mr. Stanfield's Quebec policy. And in the approaching policy conference in Niagara Falls it will be joined by conservative Conservatives from other parts of the country.

As in the debate in the Commons over the government's Official Languages Bill—when 17 members bolted from party ranks and opposed the principle — the disagreement will be potent and public.

Yet Mr. Stanfield privately seems almost to welcome the challenge, steadfast in his conviction that on the big issues the party must risk the ruptures in its own and the national interest.

Events of the past few months have, to an extent, helped him. President Nixon's announcement of a similar plan in the United States gave the idea credibility in the minds of many Conservatives. In both countries present welfare programs are under attack, and the public may be in a mood to accept a new approach.

Mr. Stanfield received significant support from Ontario Premier John Robarts at the Young Progressive Conservative Thinkers' conference. Although his endorsement of the guaranteed minimum income was qualified, the thrust of Mr. Robarts' remarks was favorable.

Despite reports to the contrary, the largest proportion of the delegates to that conference supported Mr. Stanfield. The opponents were vocal on the last day, but they didn't number more than a score.

And some of them conceded that if they can be convinced the minimum income program would rationalize the current plethora of welfare schemes, and if it contained adequate work incentives, they would support it.

Granted, delegates to that convention were by and large a well-educated, well-heeled group of urban young people. They may be representative of the type of party Mr. Stanfield is trying to build, but they are not representative of the party he now leads.

That, of course, is part of Mr. Stanfield's dilemma. The Conservative Party as represented in the House of Commons is largely rural and, with the exception of heavy Maritime support, Western-based. His policy directions, which could have significant appeal for concerned young people, conflict with the often entrenched ideas of some of his elected members.

Mr. Stanfield's thoughtful, compassionate speech at the conference about "the frustrations of our environment" was a typical example of that dilemma.

Much of the conference was spent discussing poverty — a concern which arose from Mr. Stanfield's minimum income proposal and a transatlantic telephone conversation with Robert Theobald, the world's leading exponent of the theory.

An outsider had the feeling that while the many delegates expressed a deep concern about the plight of the poor, it was a concern based on a fairly lofty academic base. Few there had any first or even second-hand connection with the people they were talking about.

Of course they cannot be blamed for this. And the encouraging reality is that by the end of the three days they themselves realized the shortcomings.

Perhaps the next conference, or some portion of it, could be held in a ghetto or on an Indian reserve. Perhaps the whole process should be decentralized, with small groups living with poverty or in poor peoples' homes, then coming together later to share experiences.

There must be a way.

The same could be said of the conference's handling of the pollution issue. Although every delegate was touched by pollution — what Canadian is not? — the discussion tended to be remote.

Next time, why not recreate the pollution right on the spot? The latest technology could be used for example, to sit the delegates in a room, then pour into that room the exact amount of black polluting smoke that every jumbo jet sprays into the air as it takes off. Accurate noise factors in factories, close to highways, could be reproduced — so could the stench of exhaust and the bilge from factories.

★ ★ ★

There could be far more confrontation, meaningful confrontation, by bringing the dissident elements of society together and challenging them firsthand.

Perhaps if these things were done, the social concern expressed at Kingston could become social action in the community.

I Beg to Differ . . .

Ten Minutes—No More

By FRANK LOWE

THE man on the phone said he was calling because the new corn was coming in and, as he knew I was a corn fancier, he would like to know how long one should boil new cobs of corn.

"No more than eight to 10 minutes," I said. "That's what I thought," my caller said. "But my wife insists on boiling corn for about 40 minutes. Is there anything I can do about this?"

Fresh, newly-picked corn on the cob, being boiled for 40 minutes. The horror of it. So all I could tell my caller was:

"Well, you could always sue for divorce."

★ ★ ★

To non-corn addicts this may sound harsh. But for those of us who know the true deliciousness of new corn, eaten no more than 15 to 20 minutes after it is picked, such a solution sounds logical.

At this point I realize there are some corn lovers who already are reading this with a curl of the lip. That bit about eating corn "20 minutes after it is picked" will do it.

Such people, are the true corn fanatics. They are such purists they insist that the only corn worth eating has to be grown in your own back yard. Furthermore, the back yard must slant down towards the back door so after the corn is picked a fellow can shuck it as he runs downhill towards the house where the pot of water is already boiling on the stove.

That way the corn is only 10 minutes old when it is finally eaten. Any corn older than that, these people insist, is not fit for human consumption.

Mind you, to live up to these standards takes a little planning and work. But the true corn lover accepts this cheerfully.

I recall, for instance, the summer in P.E.I. when the lobster session on our coast coincided with the ripening of the first new corn. The prospect of having fresh lobster AND fresh corn was so delightful I nearly became unhinged, but did hold onto enough of my faculties to plan my day like this:

First thing in the morning I made a quick drive to Charlottetown. There I picked my own lobsters off the boats and waited while they were boiled on the wharf. Then it was back to the cottage to pop the lobsters into the fridge—I like my boiled lobster cold.

Then came a visit to the lovely lady who made all kinds of home-made goodies to tell her what I needed that evening, and precisely when I would be calling.

About 6 p.m., after a couple of my own home-made, deep-dish martinis I roared out to a nearby cornfield and cut the ears.

Back to the cottage where the water was already boiling in the pot. This gave me eight to 10 minutes to visit the cooking lady and pick up the home-made blueberry pie (hot out of the oven), and the home-made ice cream.

Then it was back to the cottage for fesh, cold, boiled lobster dipped in melted (home-made) butter, accompanied by 10-minute-old corn dripping with butter, and the hot bread used to generally mop up. This was followed by the home-made blueberry-pie with the home-made ice cream sitting on the top and dripping down the sides.

As I said, it takes a little planning.

"What's he doing, resting up for sit-ins at college this fall?"

Ulster Promised Multiple Reform

(The following article by the Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, written before the current domestic strife, appeared originally in Ulster Commentary, a government publication).

By JAMES CHICHESTER-CLARK

THE government of Northern Ireland has too often been presented of late as a body which has resisted and is still resisting every kind of progressive change in the area for which it is responsible. That is not true, and it never has been true.

Unionist governments in Northern Ireland have pioneered many measures which governments elsewhere have been glad to copy.

I always prefer to speak of those things about which I know at first hand. Six years ago I became for the first time a member of the government. They have been years of phenomenal progress on many fronts. I cannot hope in the space of a short article to list all our achievements; but let us take a few at random.

We have pushed the training of industrial labor to a level far beyond anything achieved in Great Britain. The great shipbuilding yard of Harland and Wolff with a giant new drydock and building dock, has been given facilities fit to rank with the best in the world, and capable of constructing tankers of up to one million tons.

The rate of house-building has been steadily stepped up to an all-time record level of 12,000 houses a year — fully comparable with the best British figures and far in advance of construction in the Irish Republic.

A new University of Ulster has been recommended, launched and built. Today its campus at Coleraine on the River Bann is a symbol of Ulster on the move. Traffic on the westward and northward routes out of Belfast has been greatly speeded up by motorway (expressway) construction; there are no motorways elsewhere in Ireland.

The new city project of Craigavon in County Armagh has been conceived and set underway: already it is a centre for important industries.

Over the years I have been in the government I have seen firms like A.M.F. Fafnir, Swift, Autolite and Goodyear of the U.S., British Enkalon of Holland, Michelin of France and Rolls-Royce and B.P. of Britain joining the many new industries set up in Ulster since the war.

The "voluntary" (that is mainly Roman Catholic) schools have been the beneficiaries of an important new deal, providing substantially greater financial aid in return for a minority public representation on managing and governing bodies.

★ ★ ★

These are just a few of the developments, chosen at random, with which I have been proud to be associated as a member of the Unionist governments.

"Very well," some will say, "We agree that this is an impressive program of economic and social advance. But what of political reform?" Here too, the record has often been misrepresented and misunderstood.

To begin with, the area of legitimate grievances has frequently been exaggerated. Loose talk about "the franchise" has led people to imagine that a large section of the population has been disfranchised on account of religion.

The fact is that most Northern Ireland citizens have all along had three opportunities to exercise the suffrage. First of all, for elections to the United Kingdom Parliament at Westminster, the basis has always been universal adult suffrage. For Stormont (the local Parliament) too, there has all along been universal adult suffrage but up to the election held in February, 1969, there had been a minor element of multiple voting, and representation in Parliament for the Queen's University.

★ ★ ★

The decisions to end these features of the electoral system and to set up a permanent Boundary Commission to review the boundaries of all Stormont constituencies were taken long before the current civil rights clamor. (The Boundary Commission is now operating under the impartial chairmanship of a high court judge.)

Finally, elections to local government authorities have, up to now, been based upon a ratepayers' franchise. This has meant that some adults have been deprived of a vote although not of course, on any political or religious grounds.

However, we will very shortly be introducing legislation to provide that in future, elections to local authorities, like elections to the Westminster and Stormond Parliaments, will be held on a basis of "one man, one vote."

Changing the voting system will be just one element in a major reform of the whole local government structure, to reduce the current 66 elected authorities to a substantially smaller number, which will be better able to cope with the problems of the 1970s and beyond.

Our detailed proposals for this reform will be published for consideration in this session of Parliament, and our target date for carrying into effect these very complex and far-reaching changes is late 1971.

Very soon now our parliamentary commissioner or ombudsman will be able to review complaints of mal-administration against central government departments. Later in the year we will be bringing forward further legislation to deal with citizens' grievances against local authorities and other public bodies.

Hitherto, one area of complaint has been the allocation of housing by public authorities. We hope to deal with this issue by circulating very shortly to all authorities a recommended scheme of allocation, and by asking all authorities to submit for approval a scheme which can be published and will be seen to be fair.

I think it deserves to be noted that in at least three respects our government has taken action going beyond anything yet done in Great Britain: First, by deciding to establish machinery to consider citizens' grievances against local authorities, etc.; secondly, by insisting that all local authorities adopt equitable standards of housing allocation; and thirdly, which I have not yet mentioned, by setting up a special development commission for the problem city of Londonderry, to get a crash program going on jobs, houses and all the other things that city needs, and which we mean it to have.

Purpose of Square Enjoyment of All

HERE we go again — the "townspeople" versus the hippies. Personally, I'm getting powerfully tired of it.

If the tradesmen of Centennial Square see fit to dictate who frequents the square I see fit to boycott their stores. The Square is quite a lovely place and is designed for the enjoyment of all — crew cuts, duck tails and long-hair and everything in between. I have visited the Centennial Square stores quite often and have been no evidence of despoiling. Actually, the recent Shriner convention left much more rubble and noise in its wake.

I would be most happy if the tradespeople would come up with a definition of hippy. That way we'll know who we're after. Long hair and unwashed does not quite do it. How in the ever-loving blue-eyed world do they know if the hippies are unwashed or not — maybe a smelling committee would be in order. Our children run around quite grubby a lot of the time but this does not mean that they are unwashed — or do they mean unwashed in the biblical sense.

I would also like to ask Alderman Baird what municipal bylaw he is referring to and just what constitutes "loitering and loafing."

Vote Seen As Protest

I hope that by the results of the recent provincial election it has sunk home with the NDP people that the voters — including many of their own "labor" people — are more than fed up with the many strikes which go on almost continuously in this province.

The NDP leaders must be very naive to think that enough people would vote for them so that the labor force could create still more a "state" within the state. They haven't even been able to get their own "laborers" vote.

To restore true democracy we should get rid of the "closed shop" idea and the right to strike should be very heavily curtailed.

Quick Victory, Protracted Conflict, or Negotiated Peace

Rivals in Hanoi Disagree Only on Means to End War

BACKGROUND

Douglas Pike has specialized for years on Vietnam and has written two books on the subject—Viet Cong in 1966 and War, Peace and the Viet Cong last June. After spending eight years in Vietnam he recently joined the staff of the United States embassy in Tokyo.

By DOUGLAS PIKE, from Tokyo

The death of President Ho Chi Minh will have profound effects on the internal political scene in Hanoi and eventually, but not immediately, significant effect on the behavior of the North Vietnamese at the Paris talks and on the battlefield in South Vietnam.

The death of a strong leader in any country greatly alters internal political arrangements, although not always external policies over which the leader has less control.

He occupied a position unique in North Vietnamese politics. His prestige was enormous, his position unchallenged and no one could or would match his manoeuvres. His chief ability was his great organizing skill, the forming, merging and shaping of organizations to serve his purposes. He was sly, paternalistic, skilled at intrigue, master of the deceptive move and highly effective in his political world.

Second only to the dominant role of Ho in importance is the fact of concentration of power in Hanoi. The men of the politburo hold more absolute power in their hands than in any other society in the world.

The politburo now is composed of 11 members. These 11 without question will determine North Vietnam's future.

★ ★ ★

The immediate prospect is for collective leadership, the power being shared among the big five: Premier Pham Van Dong; Defence Minister Vo Nguyen Giap; theoretician Truong Chinh; Le Duan, first secretary of the Communist party; and Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh.

What divides these leaders, beyond usual political ambitions, is a major doctrinal question: How best to pursue the war in the South?

★ ★ ★

Unification of North and South Vietnam has been the single-minded, undeviating objective of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam since 1954. The difference of opinion is how best to achieve unification.

These differences have been openly and candidly stated in recent months by top officials in speeches and interviews.

★ ★ ★

Three major positions exist at the politburo level:

● Victory, that is unification, by regular-force strategy. This is the "quick victory" school, led by Gen. Giap.

The strategy, which still is being pursued in South Vietnam, argues for a combination of widespread guerrilla attacks plus small-scale conventional battles by North Vietnamese troops, all with increasing momentum and ending with a Dienbienphu-type battle.

Le Duan and most of the North Vietnamese generals are in this group.

★ ★ ★

● A return to lower level warfare, drawn out in time. This is the "protracted conflict" school led by Truong Chinh.

It argues that unification can be achieved by outlasting, outwearing and outenduring the enemy and never giving him a chance to use his superior firepower and mobility.

In this group, probably, is Le Duc Tho, the chief North Vietnamese delegate in Paris. The Chinese Communists also support this view.

● A negotiated settlement as a means of achieving unification. This is led by Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh.

Supporters argue for a strategy in which most emphasis is placed on political activity among non-Communists in South Vietnam and at the conference table.

This group is supported by the so-called "younger elements" who are not in the politburo but in the middle levels of the party and government.

Ho's death sharply weakens the regular-force advocates. But they remain numerically strong — six or seven out of the total of 11. The third school, led by Trinh, probably has only two supporters in the politburo.

The real question of future actions by North Vietnam is whether the leaders have lost stomach for continuing the war on the grounds that it is extracting too high a price from the society and thus see in Ho Chi Minh's death a chance graciously to turn the page of history.

★ ★ ★

In this event we can expect the leadership to pursue its goal of unification but not by the present strategy, of more or less conventional small-scale war.

The war in the South now is almost totally in the hands of the 130 battalions (about 100,000 men) of the Peoples Army of Vietnam.

Value of Mark Key Issue In German Poll

By NORMAN FRASER from Bonn

As the two main contestants line up for the final stages of the West German election campaign, it has become clear that the decisive battle will be over the deutsche mark. Both the Christian Democrats and the Socialists, their minority partners in the coalition government, are frantically trying to convince voters that their particular approach to the D-mark problem is the right one.

Chancellor Kurt-Georg Kiesinger and Finance Minister Franz Josef Strauss have stridently defended the government's decision not to revalue the mark upwards since the international monetary crisis in May.

★ ★ ★

And with their fingers firmly on the electoral pulse they are claiming that the French decision to devalue the franc has proved they were right all along.

In the last few days the Socialists, who hope to move their man in as the next chancellor, have made it absolutely clear that they will revalue the mark if they can form a ruling coalition after the election. Whole-page advertisements in West German national papers, paid for out of the Socialist election funds, are driving this point home.

Our neighbors, the French have acted, shouts the headline. And what happens here? Nothing. Hero of the piece in the ads is Strauss' main rival, Socialist Economics Minister Prof. Karl Schiller. The text reads: "Professor Schiller has recognized the dangers in time.

"In order to halt rising prices, Schiller and the Socialist Party want to secure the purchasing power of the mark through revaluation. We pay too much for the goods we import from abroad. To the detriment of the German saver and consumer."

★ ★ ★

The ads modestly close with the claim that after election day, Sept. 28, things will go better for Germany and Europe with the Socialists in power.

The Christian Democrats' stock answers to such attacks are that an upward revaluation of the mark would increase German prices abroad and thus dampen the German export trade. The French devaluation strengthens the competitiveness of French exporters to West Germany and gives them a better position in third-country markets.

Imports into West Germany are likely to rise since French prices will now be lowered. And as France is West Germany's largest trading partner, this will doubtless have an important effect on West German trade figures.

Much depends on the immediate development of the West German money market. A fresh inflow of "hot money" from speculators gambling on an upward revaluation might throw the government's stabilization program out of gear. A new clamp-down on the money market and a tougher credit squeeze could become inescapable, and this could be damaging to the image of the Christian Democrats.

★ ★ ★

Bonn pledged in May that the decision not to revalue the mark would be upheld "for all eternity." It now seems that this eternity could perhaps end after the new federal government has been elected.

Lull in Paris May Offer Clue

By CY FOX
From Paris

Postponement until Sept. 11 of the next Vietnam peace conference session in Paris could give non-communist participants a chance to determine whether President Ho Chi Minh's death will affect the prospects for an eventual settlement.

First reactions to his death were that it was unlikely to change the current policies of North Vietnam since Ho himself had long ago taken steps towards ensuring continuity of policy for at least the period immediately following his departure.

★ ★ ★

Renowned for his combination of revolutionary zeal and tactical flexibility, North Vietnam's chief began delegating power to trusted aides as early as 1955.

The result was that North Vietnam gave the appearance of being run by a collective leadership, with Ho providing avuncular guidance rather than exercising outright dictatorial control.

★ ★ ★

Observers noted too the absence of the more spectacular trappings associated with Communist personality cults, such as those of Stalin and Mao Tse-tung.

Thus, any abrupt power switches or an upheaval along the lines of that produced in the Soviet Union by "de-Stalinization" seem hardly probable in Hanoi despite differenences among Ho's successors on matters of military strategy.

★ ★ ★

Ho's departure, though adding a new dimension of loss to the trials caused his followers by total war, cannot be counted on to weaken Hanoi's fighting will.

The Communists in fact are certain to use the days of mourning, as well as posthumous glorification of the veteran chief, as a prime means of bolstering military resolve among the masses.

But the passing could undermine whatever appeal the Communist cause has in South Vietnam.

★ ★ ★

There his stature as probably the 20th century's most celebrated Vietnamese gave Marxism a degree of acceptability which his more pedestrian succesors in the Hanoi government may find difficult to sustain.

★ ★ ★

In Paris, meanwhile, a moderate renewal of hopes for progress in the bogged-down peace talks had been aroused before Ho's death by Communist expressions of interest in "rapid and considerable" withdrawals of American troops from Vietnam.

Child Marriages in India Widespread Though Illegal

By LESLIE MEYER
From New Delhi

Pran Mehta Shrinivas is eight years old and lives in a village with one communal water hole less than a day's drive from the Indian national capital of New Delhi. He cannot read or write — but he is married.

★ ★ ★

Pran, in fact, has been married for a year. But he does not know his wife's name, nor her age, nor her face. He has never seen her.

This is still, despite years of being outlawed, the common Indian system. Child marriage is still widespread, and tens of thousands of such betrothals occur annually, even though it has been illegal since 1931.

One day, in perhaps seven years or so, Pran will meet his bride. They may, or may not, like one another. Even less likely are they to fall in love. But almost certainly they will have many children — far more than they, or this overpopulated nation, can afford.

Child marriage, and the overfertility it brings, is a fertile source of human misery in India — and Pakistan, too — today. Yet the authorities, despite every effort, find it almost impossible to change these centuries-old social customs.

In law, the minimum age for brides is 15, for men 18. The government now wants to raise both minimum ages, for girls to 18, for men to 21. But whatever the law, customs are unlikely to change much.

★ ★ ★

For example, the Hindu Marriage Law of 1955 abolished dowries. Yet parents still scrimp and save, and burden themselves with years of debt to provide dowries for their daughters in marriage.

Often, the money a family receives on the marriage of a son will go the following year on a dowry for the marriage of a daughter. The younger the daughter marries, the better, for the smaller is the dowry.

★ ★ ★

Even when a girl marries at eight, the dowry will be 500 rupees ($63). And this, for a simple village family, is two years' earnings.

Among the higher castes, and even slightly educated, child marriage is slowly disappearing, especially in southern India. But it is still sufficiently widespread to worry the nation's planners.

For early marriage leads inevitably to early childbearing. Co-habitation begins at 15 or 16, the firstborn arrives within less than a year and a woman can have 10 children before she is 30. India's population is increasing at a disastrous rate of 14,000,000 annually.

The arranged marriage system produces perhaps even more unhappy marriages than the Western system.

Such arranged marriages, conducted on feudal caste lines, are also outlawed, but are still common form. Every Sunday in the New Delhi newspapers, columns of advertisements appear, advertising "beautiful" or "educated" or "homely" girls seeking suitable mates.

★ ★ ★

But even this system is not as barbarous as the type of nuptial which still pertains in the most backward areas, where local landowners can—and do — claim the right to possess any female, no matter how young.

Lack of Inner Message Proves 'Pike Still Alive'

JERUSALEM (AP) — Helicopters and Israeli army troops quit their search for Dr. James Pike Thursday night. Officials called for volunteers to replace the soldiers but said hope of finding the former Episcopal (Anglican) bishop of California alive was "almost a lost cause."

Pike's 31-year-old wife Diane insisted, however, her husband was still alive "because if he were dead I would have received some inner message."

"Both of us have extrasensory perception and we could communicate with each other this way."

BY TRIBESMEN

The army and police said volunteer scouts and trackers will be joined by Bedouin tribesmen today to continue the search under police co-ordination in the hot Judean wilderness.

A police spokesman said a man of Pike's age, 56, would not have lived more than a day if he wandered in the open, where temperatures are more than 100 degrees. If Pike had taken refuge in a cave, he said, the former cleric probably could last about three days without food and water.

CAVE FAVORED

Mrs. Pike told reporters she felt her husband had taken refuge in a cave. She said she had directed searchers to examine hundreds of caverns in the rugged hills and desert canyons between Bethlehem and the Dead Sea.

She said she based her belief on two "visions" by a family friend, self-styled medium Arthur Ford of Philadelphia who is recuperating from a heart attack in a New York hospital.

Ford went into a trance twice, said Mrs. Pike, and both times saw her husband in a cave, alive but sick and badly in need of water.

WITH OCCULT

The Pikes have long been associated with the occult. They collaborated on a book, The Other Side, in which Pike said he had talked to his dead son through several mediums, including Ford.

Soldiers, policemen and aircraft had combed the Judean hills since Tuesday morning. They found Pike's abandoned car, with his wallet and passport, and a map in a dry river bed about a mile away.

Searchers on foot and in helicopters followed numerous carrion birds circling overhead, but found nothing.

The Israeli army also offered a "good reward" to all Bedouin tribes living in the area for information about Pike, but the desert nomads said they had not seen him.

Pike has been missing since Monday night after his rented car got stuck on a rocky trail eight miles west of the Dead Sea. He and his wife set out for the Dead Sea on foot, but Pike told her to go ahead after he developed leg pains. Mrs. Pike walked all night until she reached a road workers' camp.

Mrs. Pike said she and her husband arrived in Israel two weeks ago to complete research on a book about Jesus. She said they drove from Bethlehem "to get the feel of the Judean hills" where tradition says Jesus spent 40 days and nights fasting.

Two decades ago Bedouin tribesmen found the Dead Sea Scrolls in the same desolate region.

Rain Postpones Nuclear Test

GRAND VALLEY, Colo. (UPI) — Rain and wind forced the postponement of the Project Rulison underground nuclear test blast Thursday and gave attorneys fighting the detonation more time to try to stop it.

The blast was scheduled for 3 p.m. Thursday, but late Wednesday night the Atomic Energy Commission postponed the detonation at least 24 hours. Forecasts called for more bad weather Friday but the weather bureau said there might be a change.

In Denver, U.S. District Judge Alfred Arraj refused to block the explosion for the second time. His ruling was immediately appealed to the 10th U.S. circuit Court of Appeals, which also has rejected a previous appeal.

But Judge Jean Breitenstein of the appeal court Thursday rejected the appeal and denied a temporary restraining order.

Social Climbers Produce Boys

Tension Key to Sex of Child

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new psychological study suggests that hard-driving, ambitious fathers are likely to sire girls and social-climbing mothers to produce boys, provided neither parent is under particular tension near the time of conception.

Also, an Iowa State University research team reported Thursday, the study indicates that:

● If both parents are under tension, they are likely to produce an even number of boys and girls in their married life, but possibly only one of each.

● If both parents are calm citizens, they are likely to have large families about equally divided by sex.

Psychologists Donald Schuster and Locky Schuster—a husband-and-wife team—told about it in a report to the closing session of the 77th annual convention of the American Psychological Association.

ANIMAL STUDIES

They said the search was prompted by evidence from other researchers' animal studies and observations that pilots of fighter planes have been found in one study to have produced a significantly higher percentage of female offspring than was true of bomber pilots.

In the latter study, the scientists had assumed that piloting a fighter craft is more stressful than manning a bomber.

FORMULA WORKED OUT

The Iowa State psychologists said they first worked out an equation that might be predictive of "sex ratio based upon anxiety scales."

They did so by giving psychological tests to 94 parents in Los Angeles whose family composition was known.

Then, they applied the equation in attempting to ascertain the sex ratio of offspring of a group of graduate students at their own university in Ames, Iowa.

All the students were married and had children, but the researchers themselves were unaware beforehand of the sex-ratio composition of the families of the students. The students were also given the same type of psychological test—designed to assess the tension factors—that had been given the Los Angeles parents.

"The type of family offspring —that is, majority boys versus majority girls—was predicted 73 per cent correctly," they wrote.

And they indicated that they came close to that score in predicting more or less evenly-divided families.

'Devastating' Effect Ascribed to Article

NEW YORK (UPI)—Lawyer-financier Roy Cohn charged Thursday that U.S. Attorney Robert Morgenthau "collaborated" with Life magazine in preparing a "viciously defamatory" article which had such an "overwhelmingly devastating" effect that Cohn now can't get a fair trial.

The charge, among others, was made in a petition filed Thursday with U.S. District Judge Inzer Wyatt, scheduled to convene a trial Sept. 23 on charges against Cohn of bribery and conspiracy in connection with the affairs the Fifth Avenue Coach Lines, of which Cohn was an officer before New York City took over the lines in 1962.

The petition, filed by Cohn's lawyer, asked the court to either dismiss the charges or delay the trial a year.

The Life article, in the Sept. 5 issue, is entitled The Hotshot One-Man Roy Cohn lobby. It says Cohn, through his friendship with J. Edgar Hoover, caused the censure and transfer on 36 hours' notice of three FBI agents who gave affidavits in a case involved in Morgenthau's prosecution of Cohn.

Cohn, a protege of the late senator Joseph McCarthy, said in the petition he "categorically denied" having been responsible in any way for the transfer of the agents.

Topless Revolt Staged

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — An estimated 160 shrieking girls, several of them topless, staged an anti-Vietnam protest at the South Hills high school Thursday, smearing paint on walls and scratching police and teachers.

Two patrolmen and two students were injured and 34 persons arrested, including 30 girls, described as of college age.

The demonstrators, many of them hippies and apparently from out of town, started the protest during the luncheon recess and attempted to get the high school students to join them by shouting "jail break" and "shut down the school."

The students refused and drew praise from school supt. James Johnston who said the pupils "behaved admirably."

A spokesman for the board of education said the demonstrators were "presumably college students and presumably members of the Students for Democratic Society."

The girls scuffled with teachers and at least one male teacher was knocked down. Then police arrived, they tried to persuade the demonstrators to leave but were scratched and punched.

National Guard Called

Gangs Shut Schools

From UPI

National guardsmen were ordered into Aliceville, Ala., Thursday when about 70 singing and hand-clapping Negro children forced the closing of the city's two all-black schools for the day.

Gov. Albert Brewer sent 100 guardsmen into the town of 4,000, situated about 15 miles from the Mississippi state line, because, he said, a large band of "young militants" was roaming Aliceville's streets.

Sheriff Louis Coleman said, however, there were no gangs on the streets, and that the guard had been requested only "to give the colored kids who want to go to school protection."

Mayor Roy Kelly said troopers, guardsmen and local police will be on the scene today so that "any black person in Aliceville who wants to send their children to school may do so with full assurance that their child will be protected."

Nearing the end of the first week of school, most sections of the south appeared to be accepting stepped-up integration brought about by the new zoning plans the federal government engineered in many areas. But in some places, the plans were being opposed by both blacks and whites — primarily because the zoning required the busing of students.

Car Chase Barely Succeeds

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 26-year-old man, completely nude, led police on a wild car chase along Sunset Boulevard Thursday until he was captured in the mountains north of here.

Police said Ron Vogel, identified as a student, walked into the underground garage of an apartment building on Wilshire Boulevard and removed all of his clothing, piling it neatly on the floor.

A couple who are residents of the building entered the garage just as Vogel completed his disrobing. The man called police, telling them Vogel had jumped into an expensive car parked there and drove off au naturel.

TWO STOPS

A patrol car spotted the car on Sunset and began a chase that went on for miles with Vobel stopping twice and then ramming the police car and once trying to drive up the side of a mountain.

He finally crashed into the abutment of a bridge and the patrol car rammed into the coupe. Both cars were a total loss.

Officer Don Wicklund said Vogel told him somewhat vaguely that "I was on my way to see my dad."

Asked why he had stripped, Vogel said:

"I wanted to change the laws on nudity."

LONDON (AP) — A boiler-room fire broke out on board the U.S. Navy guided missile destroyer Dewey at Toulon, France, the navy reported in London.

Nixon Curbs Construction

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

The fight against inflation is still on. President Nixon's call for a 75 per cent reduction in all new contracts for U.S. government construction is regarded as a sharp restraint on public spending.

The announcement did not come until after the closing of the New York stock exchange, but the market, in its sharpest fall in over a month, indicated that further dampening news was expected.

The cut in new construction contracts was taken as another step in Washington's campaign to stop inflation.

Weakness in the bond market during the past few days was reflected Thursday in the tame bidding for Government of Canada treasury bills.

The yield on the 91-day bills was 7.72 per cent compared with 7.69 per cent a week ago.

ZINC PRICES RAISED

Three of Canada's largest producers of zinc have raised their prices by one cent a pound, in line with similar advances made earlier in the U.S.

The new domestic price set by Cominco Ltd., Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting and Noranda is 15½ cents a pound. Zinc has been selling at 14½ cents a pound since last May when it was raised half a cent from 14 cents.

STRIKE HITS PROFITS

Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd., does not expect 1969 to be as good a year as 1968 because its revenues have been badly interrupted by a long drawn out strike at Iron Ore Co. of Canada.

Although this strike was recently settled, president A. L. Fairley Jr. said some but not all of the lost production would be made up in the balance of the year. Most of Labrador's income comes from iron royalties paid by Iron Ore of Canada.

First half earnings of Labrador were $2,529,000 (76.5 cents a share) compared with $2,787,000 (84.5 cents) in the corresponding half of 1968.

□

PROFIT FROM GAS

Vancouver Island Gas Company Limited of Nanaimo turned a loss of $11,188 in the first half of 1968 into a net profit of $51,248 this year.

Revenue rose to $182,556 from $155,234 a year ago and a management fee of $37,737 net was received from Vigas Propane Limited which it manages under agreement.

LARGEST OUTLET

Construction was the biggest outlet for Canadian lumber products in 1968.

King Fisherman

Trout Grows in Stature After Gargantuan Nitinat Catch

Fish have a habit of getting heavier as fish stories are told over and over again. Here is one that truly did.

Jim Cottam's lucky fish was a 1.15-pound trout from Cowichan Lake in May. It won him a rod-and-reel outfit as a hidden weight prize.

The first time he used his new outfit was at the Nitinat Bar a few days ago and he landed a 47-14-pound salmon on it.

Ed Scott, 501 Marigold, has another true fish story. He was fishing Becher Bay Saturday and hooked into a 7.10-pound coho. As he was reeling it in he saw another salmon following. That salmon darted at the other fish, became tangled in the leader and his wife Peggy netted them both. The second salmon was 7.8-pound pink.

IBM makes it small.

That's right, small.

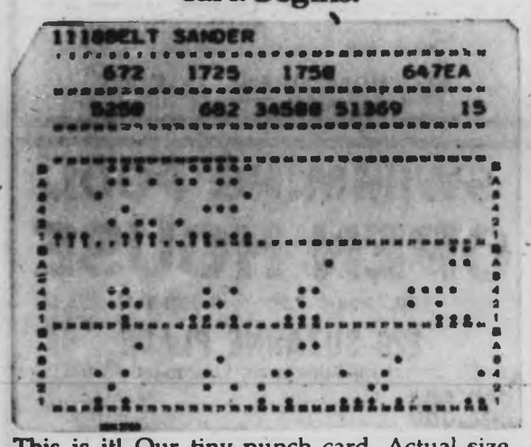

We're introducing a brand new computer.

A computer that uses a small punch card that can soak up more information than one three times its size.

A computer that's especially designed for the small businessman.

It's System/3. The small business computer.

The day of the small punch card begins.

This is it! Our tiny punch card. Actual size. It can soak up 20 percent more information than one three times its size.

With System/3, you'll use a new punch card that's one-third the size of the regular card.

And for good reason.

It's easier to handle. Easier to store. And easier to process through your machine.

Instead of 80 columns, it has 96 columns.

Which means it can actually absorb 20 percent more information than the 80-column card you're used to seeing.

Cutting it down to size.

There's one thing you'll notice immediately about System/3.

Its size.

System/3 is small. In fact, it's a lot smaller than any business computer we've ever made.

If you have a 350-square-foot room, you have room enough for System/3.

We've been able to cut it down to size because we've been able to use improved circuit families and the small card which lets you do more computing in less space.

But although it's small in size, System/3 is big in memory. You can have as much as 32,768 bytes of core storage.

More with less.

With System/3, you don't have to have a lot of machines handling your cards. Because our multi-function card unit can do as many as six different jobs.

It can read up to 500 cards a minute.

And it can also be used to punch, sort, print, collate and reproduce your cards.

For off-line work there are two new separate units you can use with System/3. A card sorter. And a data recorder for card punching and verifying.

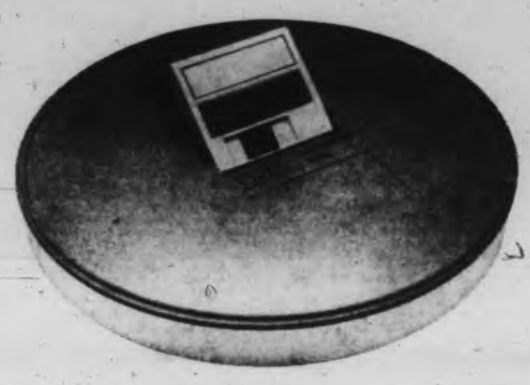

Your choice: disk or card.

System/3 isn't just one computer.

It's your choice.

If you've got a small business you might already be using some business machines. So for you the card system is worth considering.

If you have a lot of records to store, you might want to choose the disk system.

Our long-playing disks. Each one can give you direct access to 2.45 million bytes of data. As your business gets bigger, just add more disks. Up to four in all.

It gives you direct access to your files.

Which means you can update your inventory or billing records in minutes.

If you run a big business, you might find it economical to put System/3 in every one of your factories. Or in every warehouse.

It'll manage the paperwork.

No matter what system you use, System/3 can make running your business a lot easier.

You can keep tabs on whatever you have (or don't have) in stock. And reorder only what needs reordering.

You can spot a project in trouble. Track vendor shipments. And discover how your salesmen are doing this year compared to last.

In short, System/3 can manage the paperwork while you manage the business.

Easy does it.

And listen to this. System/3 is easy to put in your office. No cables to lay. No special wiring. Just plug it into any 220-volt line.

The growth computer.

Ambitious Circuit Plans Hit Early Snag

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Tournament tennis players used the second day's rainout of the United States Open to disclose ambitious plans for a world-wide circuit, similar to that in golf, Thursday and then ran into an immediate snag.

It looked like the Professional Golfers Association war all over again, in white pants.

John Newcombe of Australia, chairman of an organization known as the International Tennis Players Association, called a special press conference at a midtown hotel to announce a $50,000-added open tournament in Philadelphia next winter to be run by the players themselves.

WORLD'S GREATEST?

"It will be the ITPA Championships, the PGA of tennis," Newcombe said. The place is the Spectrum in Philadelphia. The date, Feb. 2-8. The contestants, according to Newcombe, "72 of the world's greatest players."

Reporters leaving the meeting ran into George MacCall, director of the National Tennis League, registering in the hotel lobby.

"Are your boys in on this deal?" MacCall was asked.

"I wasn't even invited to the press conference; I know nothing about it," MacCall replied. "Our players are definitely not committed."

Asked if MacCall's players, who include six of the best in the world—Rod Laver, Roy Emerson, Ken Rosewall, Fred Stolle, Pancho Gonzales and Andres Gimeno—would compete in the event at Philadelphia, the Los Angeles promoter said:

"As of this moment, I would say no. We will schedule around it."

"Laver and other players of the National League assured us they will play," said Charlie Pasarell, U.S. Davis Cup player who serves as vice-chairman of the players' group.

However, MacCall, as director of the National League, calls the shots. His players compete where he says.

The same is true of Bob Briner of the rival World Championship Tennis, Inc., which includes such players as Newcombe, Tony Roche, Dennis Ralston, Marty Riessen, Roger Taylor and Ray Moore, but Briner is reported favorable to the venture. He couldn't be reached for comment.

Steady rain prevented play in the U.S. Open for the second straight day and forced postponement of the men's final until Monday.

If the skies clear—and there is no guarantee of it—the women's two semi-final matches, a fourth round match in the men's singles and three quarter-finals will be staged today.

In the women's division, favored Margaret Court of Australia plays Virginia Wade of Britain, the defending champion, and Rosemary Casals of San Francisco goes against Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex.

Forty-one-year-old Gonzales must play Australia's third-seeded Roche in a delayed fourth-round match. In other matches, all quarter-finals, top-seeded Laver meets fellow Australian Emerson; defending champion Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va., faces Ken Rosewall of Australia, and Newcombe meets another Aussie, Stolle. Earl (Butch) Buchholz of St. Louis is awaiting the Gonzales-Roche winner.

Twenty-three-year-old Jones

Score of Golfers at 69 ...Locked in 15th Place

WALLED LAKE, Mich. —Par took a beating Thursday in the opening round of the $100,000 Michigan Golf Classic with 33 professionals bettering the regulation 70 strokes at the Shenandoah Club course.

Tour rookies Grier Jones, 23, of Wichita, Kan., and Bob Menne, 27, of Andover, Mass., let the onslaught with 65s.

Next at 66 came Jack Montgomery of Norman, Okla., followed by Toronto's Al Balding and South Africa's Bobby Cole at 67.

Another nine were bunched at 68 while 20 golfers bettered par by one stroke to share 15th place.

Jones, who plays out of Freeport in the Grand Bahama Islands, went out in a torrid 30 as the players found the front nine of the 6708-yard course generally much easier than the back nine.

Menne was much steadier with a front nine of 32 and a 33 coming home.

Kermit Zarley, in the group at 68 along with other tour veterans Bob Goalby and Chi Chi Rodriguez, also had a hot front nine with a 31 before slipping to his 37 on the final nine holes.

Only four of the 33 par breakers found things easier on the back nine, all finishing with 69s.

John Schlee recovered with a fine 32 on the home stretch while Tommy Aycock and Billy Lively each had 33s.

Winnipeg's Wilf Homenuik was a steadier 35-34—69.

Buck deer shooting season opens on Vancouver Island Saturday and outlook for an easy bag is glum. Last winter's severe weather took a heavy toll on deer populations. Biologists predict Vancouver Island will only give up half as many deer this season as last . . . down to 12,000 from 25,000.

Spring carry-over counts indicated the Sooke area wasn't as badly hit as other areas. Kelsey Bay wasn't hit too badly, but east coast areas from Menzies Bay in the north to Deerholme in the south were hit hard, and so was the Alberni Valley area.

August fawn count in the Nimpkish showed "lots of deer, but lots less than last year." The hunters who drove into the Nimpkish the past year or two and found easy hunting are going to have to get out and work for their deer this year.

Those who work in the woods report it was "the worst winter deer kill within their memory."

Sportsmen have cried for shorter seasons, smaller bag limits, and no antlerless season. They got a somewhat shorter season.

If they are sincere in their demands, they can help by cutting down on their own activity by taking fewer deer and no antlerless animals. Every deer saved might help.

But game biologists maintain the hunter kill doesn't make much difference to deer populations and point to the heavy winter kill as evidence that even more deer could have been harvested last hunting season.

Hunters should take note that no rifle shooting is allowed on the Gulf Islands or in the Highland District, outside Victoria, this season. Shotgun slugs may be used on the Gulf Island, but in the Highlands only buckshot may be used for deer.

* * *

Hunter access into timberlands looks brighter than ever this year and recreationist behavior in the woods will be the key point in the continuance of public access on an amiable basis.

Sooke River Road along the potholes, where the road is controlled by a private owner, may by a sore point again this year. Indications are the owner may block off his section of the road. Pacific Logging, which logs along the road through a contractor, is quick to point out that if the road is closed it will not be because of any action by the logging company.

It is time the government stepped in and did something about making sure this road is open. It is a ridiculous situation to have it closed.

B.C. Hydro will close off Jordan River-Bear Creek Reservoir Road, where work is under way for new hydro installations. Why a government agency shuts off a road to weekend recreational access when privately-owned timber companies open their areas is another point that will bear some investigation. And explanation.

No slash burning is planned in the woods for this weekend, but logging companies are watching weather conditions carefully and will start slash burning at first opportunity. No curtailment of access is planned in the Sooke area because of slash burning, when it happens, unless slash gets out of control, but hunters should avoid burning areas and exercise extreme caution.

There may be some logging activity on Saturdays because production fell behind schedule in the severe winter conditions, but no curtailment is planned of access on weekends . . . again extreme caution for your own safety is advised.

Sooke Combined Fire Organization has re-issued its "Sportsmen Welcome" 'map, showing 230 square miles of accessible hunting area, and the new one is up-dated and much more complete than previous maps. It shows both active and non-active areas, but they are not marked as such. Access won't be permitted to all the roads shown, but where no access is permitted there will either be gates or signs declaring "no access active logging." That means no entry on foot or by vehicle, and adherence to these messages will ensure a continuation of the public access policy.

The Sooke fire organization is offering a $500 reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of anyone damaging equipment or logging property. You shouldn't really need the incentive of a reward. It is to the benefit of every recreationist to stop activities of the small percentage of "bad actors" who jeopardize the whole public access program.

Sooke to Oak Bay waters are still the big news on the fishing front, but now that September is here watch storm and fog conditions a little more carefully. You can hardly miss boating fish — pinks, coho and chinooks in that order — if you hit a bite time. Average catch this week has been about six salmon a boat in Pedder Bay to Sooke waters, somewhat fewer in Victoria and Oak Bay waters.

Alberni Inlet is at its best period for tyee fishing and tyee fishing has turned better at Campbell River. The boundary line has been placed on Cowichan Bay from Skinner Point to the docks, as marked by fishing boundary signs, but chinook salmon fishing has been pretty good outside the boundary. Coho fishing has been spotty.

Higher Level Sought for Goldstream As Low Water Threatens Coho Fry

Low water in the Goldstream is threatening survival of the biggest hatch of coho fry to appear in that river for many years.

The Amalgamated Conservation Society has asked the federal fisheries department to try to persuade the Greater Victoria Water Board to allow more water to flow into the Goldstream for the next week or so, until the weather gets a a little cooler and there is more moisture.

A river will only rear as many fish as it can handle at its lowest flow of the year.

"It is estimated there are now 50,000 coho fry in the Goldstream, almost like it used to be," said ACS spokesman Howard English.

"We are so close to winning. It would be a shame not to make it for the matter of a few weeks," he added.

This year's poor coho run in the Gulf of Georgia is blamed on low river levels of the summer of 1967. It is feared that if water is not fed to the Goldstream immediately there may be a repeat of that disastrous year, at least in Saanich Inlet and other waters frequented by Goldstream salmon.

The conservationists are also concerned about people throwing stones and boulder into the Goldstream. In the low water conditions the fry could be killed by concussion, they warn.

The water board controls the Goldstream water flow

Davis' Streak Snapped

Lowly Padres Stop Dodgers

The last-place San Diego Padres proved too much for Willie Davis and the Los Angeles Dodgers in Thursday's lone National League game.

Padres blanked the Dodgers, 3-0, as pitchers Dick Kelley and Gary Ross combined to stop Davis' consecutive-game hitting streak at 31 games, the longest in major league baseball in more than 20 years.

Kelley retired Davis on a grounder to second base in the first inning and Ross came on in the third inning when Kelley was injured and got Davis on a similar ground out.

Ross got Davis to ground to first base in the fifth inning, making the putout himself, and then struck out the Dodger centre fielder in the eighth inning.

The loss dropped the Dodgers a game and one-half behind leading San Francisco Giants and one percentage point behind the second-place Cincinnati Reds.

Former-Dodger Al Ferrara sparked the Padres by driving in all three runs with a two-run double in the third inning and a home run in the sixth inning against loser Bill Singer, who suffered his ninth loss against 17 victories.

In the American League the Baltimore Orioles again displayed the explosive batting which has made them the runaway leaders in the Eastern Division.

Earl Wilson of Detroit Tigers was working on a three-hitter and a 4-1 lead going into the final inning when Orioles unleashed consecutive home runs by Frank Robinson, his 30th, Boog Powell, his 36th, and Brooks Robinson, his 22nd.

That chased Wilson and Dave Johnson greeted reliever Tom Timmerman with a double and came around with the deciding run on a long fly ball and a ground out.

In the Western Division, Minnesota Twins opened up a seven and one-half game bulge over second-place Oakland when Cesar Tovar's 10th-inning grand-slam home run sparked the leaders to a 10-5 victory over the Athletics.

Seattle Pilots lost for the 15th straight time at home when Kansas City Royals scored a 5-3 victory.

Winning pitcher Dick Drago contributed his first major-league hit, a run-scoring double in the eighth inning, to help send Seattle starter John Gelnar to his ninth straight defeat.

A lead-off base on balls to Sandy Alomar, Jay Johnstone's bloop single and Jim Fregosi's run-scoring infield grounder in the first inning gave California Angels a 1-0 victory over Chicago White Sox.

Hard-luck loser Tommy John, 11-17, allowed only one other hit.

Cougar Recruiting Drive Produces 26 Hopefuls

Victoria Cougars Thursday released the result of an extensive recruiting program needed to fill gaps caused by the loss of all but nine of the players who last season won the B.C. Junior Hockey League championship.

Twenty-six newcomers, 16 of them from outside the Greater Victoria area, are on the training camp list given out by managing-director Bob Reid.

LOTS OF BEEF

Included in the list of new talent are four defencemen averaging almost 200 pounds — Dale Pennock, a 210-pounder from San Diego; Alan McAllister, a 190-pounder from Edmonton; Randy Bock, a 190-pounder from Kimberley, and 200-pound Don Martineau from Chilliwack.

Also from Kimberley are forwards Robbie Little and John Kwasney and forward Greg Robinson is another Chilliwack prospect.

BIG CONTRIBUTOR

Prince George is the biggest potential contributor, tapped for four players — defencemen Harry Turk and Dwayne Holmes and forwards Jim Snook and Vern Norbraten.

Other "imports" include forwards Bob Bowman from Vancouver Nor'Wests "B" team last season, Hugh Trask of Quesnel, Pat Askew of Cranbrook, Ted Plowe of Williams Lake and Terry Oscarson of Port Alberni.

Three goalkeepers from the Greater Victoria area will compete for the job of backing up holdover Ed Forslund — Daryl Sparks and Geoff Ward from the Victoria Minor Hockey Association and Dave Maynard from Saanich.

Other Victoria area newcomers who will report to coach Doug Anderson when training camp opens Sept. 14 at Memorial Arena are defencemen Jim Buchanan and Doug Neilson and forward Bruce MacFarland of Esquimalt, forwards Mark Thomas and Chris Riddell of Saanich and forwards George Walton and Phil Blake, who played last season at the Victoria Racquet Club.

OTHER HOLDOVERS

In addition to Forsund, holdovers include defencemen Murray Kennett, Gerry Bond and Lawrie Moore and forwards Scott Munro, Graham Brown, Shayne Webster, Lon Miles and Bob Merluk.

Forslund was recruited from Vernon, Bond and Moore from Kamloops, Webster from Fernie and Miles from Port Alberni. Kennet, Munro, Brown and Merluk are graduates from Greater Victoria minor hockey associations.

Cougars will play two exhibition games — against the Luckies in Port Alberni on Sept. 27 and San Diego Gulls of the Western Hockey League at Memorial Arena on Monday, Sept. 29.

They open their season at home on Oct. 4 against Penticton Broncos.

Soccer Signings Saturday

Several districts are holding minor soccer registrations for boys six to 16 years old.

Lake Hill is holding registrations at Reynolds Park on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 to 3 p.m. and on Sunday from 1 to 3 p.m.

Boys in the Lansdowne area are requested to register at the junior high school grounds from 10 a.m. to 12 noon on Saturday.

Gorge Soccer Association is holding their registrations Saturday from 10 to 11 a.m.

Prospect Lake is holding registrations Monday at 6:30 p.m. at Royal Oak School.

Salmonbellies Square Series

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forward Dave Tory scored five goals, biggest output of his career, to lead New Westminster Salmonbellies to a 20-10 win over Vancouver Carlings Thursday night to tie the best-of-five Western Lacrosse Association semi-final at a game each.

Third game will be played in New Westminster, Sunday with the fourth scheduled here Monday. Winner of the series meets Coquitlam Adanacs, regular season champions, in the Western Canada final.

Tory, who scored only 18 goals during the regular season, collected two goals in each of the second and third periods. The Salmonbellies took a 5-1 lead in the first period, led 14-4 at the end of the second.

Defenceman Wayne Shuttleworth scored four goals and had four assists for New Westminster while Wayne Goss finished with three goals and three assists.

Jack Henry scored twice. Dave Matheson, Walt Weaver, Paul Parnell, Mac Tyler, Ken Winzoski and Ken Oddy added singles.

Bill Robinson led Vancouver with three goals, all in the second period. Bob Salt and Gord Frederickson had two each with Bill Rawson, Brian Davidson and Dan Cameron adding singles.

Vancouver won the opening game, 14-12.

About 1000 fans saw Thursday's contest.

Riders Threaten to Ban Television

OTTAWA (CP) — Red O'Quinn, general manager of Ottawa Rough Riders, said Thursday the football club will ban all television of home games next year if no settlement is reached with cable television interests.

O'Quinn said he and club owner David Loeb have made it clear to officials of the Canadian Football league that if no arrangement is worked out with the cable companies soon, all home game television will be cut off.

He said the CTV network, owner of CFL television rights this year, is pursuing the matter with cable company representatives on the football club's behalf, but added: "If no arrangement is worked out we will ban television."

The general manager said the Riders budgeted for a deficit for the end of this season and will lose "a few top players" if the cable TV problem is not solved.

The Riders threatened to ban home-game TV for the 1969 season after the Canadian Radio Television Commission, Broadcasting's regulatory agency, declined to intervene in the dispute between the football clubs and the cable TV operators. However, the club dropped this plan when it became apparent it would jeopardize the whole TV agreement and revenue for other CFL teams.

O'Quinn said under the current contract with CTV for this year, the Riders get approximately $120,000 in TV revenue.

"Our attendance has been down for every game at home this year and we are going to have to do something about it," O'Quinn said.

"It seems we fill every other ball park but our own."

Two cable television companies carry Ottawa home games from stations in Kingston and Montreal, outside the 75-mile blackout limit imposed by the CFL.

Ariverderci!

Mayfair Coffee House, formerly Suburban Motors of the Victoria and District Soccer League, plays the crew from the Princess Italia cruise ship in the final match of their series Saturday at Royal Athletic Park starting at 10 p.m.

Rocco Francis Marchegiano won the heavyweight championship of the world from Jersey Joe Walcott in the most exciting fight for the title since Dempsey-Firpo. Dropped by a left hook in the first round, frustrated and punished through 12, he still had enough in the 13th round to take his foe out with one short right to the chops.

It must have been three or four in the morning when Bill Heinz, of the New York Sun, wound up his night's work and crawled into bed in Philadelphia's Hotel Warwick. "I wonder," he said sleepily, "what Rocky's doing. I bet he isn't sleeping."

The question was put to Rocky Marciano later. He laughed. No, he said, he couldn't sleep that night. Along about three or four he had gone out and walked around Rittenhouse Square and out Walnut Street a piece and back on Chestnut. "There were a lot of people on the streets then," he said, eyes wide.

The astonishment in his tone seemed odd until one thought, "Of course, Chances are he hadn't been out in a big city at that hour since he was a kid, if ever. After high school he was in the army and then he tried to be a ball player and since then he's been in training as a fighter."

★ ★ ★

Daylight was coming on, Rocky said, by the time he got to bed. He slept a few hours.

"When I woke up," he said, "I didn't know where I was or nothin', but I had a kind of feeling something good had happened."

Something good. For a husky, hungry son of toil from Brockton, Mass., nothing on earth could beat being heavyweight champion of the world.

Rocky Marciano was not a skillful boxer, he wasn't fast or graceful or stylish. He was just one the greatest fighters that ever lived. He reduced fist fighting to its simplest terms. He walked in and punched as long as there was anybody there to hit.

He fought 49 times as a professional. He won 49 times. Only six times was a man there with him at the finish. Only once did an opponent win the vote of a single judge. Rocky was the strongest, the toughest, the most tireless. If any man could be indestructible it would have been he. Then that plane came down in a patch of Iowa woods.

It is painful to picture that wonderful body broken. No athlete ever took better care of himself physically. "Rocky," Frank Graham said, "is addicted to exercise as some men are addicted to the bottle."

From the time he set out to make his way with his fists, Rock was never out of training. He prepared for most of his biggest bouts at Grossinger's in the Catskills and after he won the title he was up there more than he was away.

Even when he had no match in prospect, he would be living like a muscular monk in the cottage at Grossinger's airport, doing roadwork in the morning, taking hikes at night, working out in between in a hangar fitted out as a gym.

His personality, like his ring technique, was marked by simplicity. He was unaffected, warm, straightforward. One day he was asked about his first bout with Roland LaStarza, the only one where he had to accept a split decision.

"Oh, it was an ahful good fight," he said in his flat New England accent. "I thought I won it but I guess some didn't. It was an ahful good fight." He sounded like a fan.

★ ★ ★

There was nobody near his class when he retired. He quit because there was no prospect of a match that would draw a worthwhile purse. It was the first big step he ever took on his own, for the Army doesn't encourage independence and in boxing Al Weill, the manager, made the decisions.

Almost immediately Rocky was faced with another decision. Magazines were bidding furiously for his memoirs, each had a different writer in mind, and Rocky was friendly with all of them. He was writhing with indecision. "Look," said his best friend Allie Columbo, in the presence of one bidder, "you know Bill here, and you trust him. Why don't you just sign up with him and forget it?"

"Allie," Rock said, "you don't understand. I don't mind knocking a guy out, but I just don't want to hurt anybody's feelings."

ARSENAL WINS

LONDON (CP) — Arsenal beat Southampton, 2-0, in an English League Cup second-round soccer replay Thursday night after extra time.

Retains Title

Gary Dornhoefer of Philadelphia Flyers fired a par 72 Thursday and won the National Hockey League golf tournament for the third straight year with a 36-hole total of 145. Jim Pappin of Chicago was runner-up with 152 while Yvan Cournoyer of Montreal had 153, Bobby Rousseau, also of Montreal, 153, and Gary Swain of Pittsburgh, 157. The tournament was played at Manchester, Vermont.

Thousands Pay Tribute To Marciano

BROCKTON, Mass (AP) — Nearly 2000 persons crowded into St. Colman's Roman Catholic Church Thursday to pay final tribute to Rocky Marciano, 46, former heavyweight boxing champion.

Another 1000 stood outside as 11 priests participated in the funeral Mass.

Willie Pep, three-time world featherweight champion; Paul Pender, former middleweight champ; and Tony Zale, another former middleweight king attended the service.

Marciano, the 'Brockton Blockbuster' who slugged his way to the top of his tough profession with more strength and courage than pugilistic skill, died Sunday night in a plane crash in a pasture in Newton, Iowa.

Distaff Pros Tackle B.C. 'Monster'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The miniskirt and walking-short set take over the 6521-yard Shaughnessy Golf and Country Club course today for the $35,000 women's Canadian open golf championship.

None of the 62 pros and 15 amateurs are talking about taming the par 37-36—73 Shaughnessy layout, nicknamed The Monster for the 54-hole tournament which carries top money of $4,012.

"The course has a reputation for being long and tough," says Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., 1968 rookie of the year on the women's tour.

"But the way it has been set up, you don't have to keep hitting long, long, long. Instead of 10 big hitters, you have some 60 girls with a good chance."

All the big names from the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour are here—Mickey Wright, a charter member of the Big Three in women's golf, Kathy Whitworth and Carol Mann, leading LPGA money winner.

Miss Post, who has won only $7,710 this year, will be looking for her first victory of the season.

Monster courses are nothing new to the girls on the tour.

Miss Post says they will never forget the Concord Open last year at Kiamesha Lake, N.Y., a par-77, 7134-yard horror show with no women's tee markers.

"It wasn't even enjoyable, just wood, wood and more wood," said Miss Post.

The Shaughnessy course should favor the big hitters like Miss Mann, Miss Wright and Donna Caponi only slightly.

The par-five, 480-yard 14th hole has been shortened to a 385-yard, par four in the middle on the toughest stretch on the course. The 13th, 14th and 15th are all par fours and the 16th now is a 510-yard par five.

"The par fours are going to be the tough holes and I don't know what's going to happen if that wind comes up from the northwest," Miss Post said.

"But the par threes are playable and provide birdie chances with middle irons."

Leonard Wirtz, LPGA tournament director, predicts a score of even-par 219 or 220 should win it.

Miss Mann, who has already won $35,549 on the tour this year comes to Vancouver from back-to-back victories in the Southgate Open in Leawood, Kan. and the Tournament of Champions in Winnipeg where she defeated Jan Ferraris in a sudden-death playoff.

Williams Will Be Back

BOSTON (AP) — Ted Williams, winding up his rookie season as manager of Washington Senators, indicated Thursday he will be back as field boss in 1970, but that could be his final season in uniform.

"I suppose I'll be back next season, but I'm not going to make a long career of managing," said Williams.

"I mean that I have enjoyed this season for two reasons. One is the improvement shown by the Senators. The other is the ovations I have received in every city around the circuit on my return to baseball. Otherwise, the job has been nothing but hard work."

Sooke Loggers Win Race

A five-man team of loggers from Sooke Monday won the North American teams relay race at the Pacific National Exhibition's festival of forestry.

Armand Didier, Ron Hartill, Brian Herlihy, Dick Herring and John Martin completed eight logger sports in five minutes, 37 seconds to collect $1,250 in prize money, plus individual trophies.

The eight events in the competition were: speed climbing, chokerman's race, single-hand sawing, underhand chop, double sawing, standing block chop, axe throwing and springboard chop.

★ ★ ★

At the conclusion of the events, the teams had to jump into the log-birling pool and were timed as they hit the water.

A complete list of winners in the eight North American Open Championship events included: standing block chop — Brian Herlihy, Sooke (second) — Dick Herring, Victoria (fourth); axe throw — Allan Woodrow, Courtenay (first), Alan Boyko, Port Alberni (third); obstacle pole bucking; John Kasnik, Port Alberni, (first); Ron Hartill, Sooke (third); springboard chop — Herlihy (second), Herring (fourth); chokerman's race — Boyko (second); Les Stewart, Port Alberni (third).

Jewish Graves Vandal Target

COLOGNE (AP) — A Jewish cemetery on the Rhine River has been vandalized and almost destroyed, West German police discovered. More than 150 gravestones were overturned and smashed, a police spokesman said.

Asians Buy Simcoes

A Southeast Asian concern has purchased the Lord and Lady Simcoe apartments in James Bay for $4,250,000.

Robert Lee, vice-president of Wall and Redekop Realty of Vancouver, which handled the transaction, said the buyer, from Hong Kong, chose to remain anonymous. The purchase was made through Amon Investments, a Vancouver company.

The $2,400,000, 13-storey twin towers were built in 1964 and 1965. They contain 233 suites.

Five Dong Rings City Hall Bell

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Burton Manning, stationed with the U.S. army near Saigon, mailed Syracuse traffic court 350 dimes and five dong in Vietnamese currency in payment of a $3 parking ticket he received while on leave.

If the court can find a bank to exchange the currency, at the current exchange rate the city will receive about four cents more than the fine.

CORNWALL, Ont. — Kahn-Tineta Horn, the Montreal model and Mohawk Indian crusader, was found not guilty in court here on a charge of possession of a knife. Judge James Clare ruled the prosecution had failed to prove their case against her.

□

LONDON — Wartime prime minister Winston Churchill often shared his scotch with a tippling budgerigar, former prime minister Harold Macmillan revealed in the latest volume of his autobiography. The budgerigar, a bird resembling a parakeet, would perch atop Churchill's head and help itself to the scotch and soda Churchill held high while he and Macmillan discussed the war, Macmillan said in the book Tides of fortune.

□

TOKYO — Mrs. Hiroko Yamamoto, only woman occupant of Tokyo prison's death row, ended 20 years in the shadow of the hangman's noose when the Japanese cabinet commuted her sentence to life imprisonment. She was sentenced to death in 1949 for murdering the wife of a money lender who refused her a loan.

□

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. — "Let's go — I just grabbed a bag of money," said the man who leaped into the car. And go they did — right to the police station. Police said McEvoy Robinson, 37, charged with grabbing a bank deposit bag, was being pursued by pedestrians when he sought a getaway driver. The man he picked was Detective John Epling.

New Fellini Movie Hailed by All

VENICE, Italy (UPI) — Spectators who paid up to $80 for black market tickets to see Italian director Federico Fellini's first film in nearly five years hailed it as a masterpiece Thursday. Critics were almost as enthusiastic.

The film Satyricon was the highlight of the 30th Venice Film Festival and caused an unprecedented demand for tickets.

"It's a powerhouse," critics raved. "He's broken every rule and gotten away with it."

Waves of applause swept through the theatre as the film, based on fragments of the Latin classic Satyricon of Petronius Arbiter, moved from one major scene to another.

"Vi-va," chanted fans as Fellini entered, flanked by the virtually unknown actors and actresses he cast for his 11th film and the first since 1965 when he completed Juliet of the Spirits.

"It's a tremendous work," said critic Guglielmo Biraghi. "It is stupendous. Be sure of this."

Petition Urges New 1A Route

Highway 'Bloodshed Sickening'

By NANCY BROWN

Sickened by bloodshed on highway 1A through View Royal, 500 residents have petitioned for a new road capable of handling the heavy traffic which uses the highway daily.

However, Highways Minister Wesley Black told them that, while he agrees traffic is heavy, he will make no commitment about future plans.

Petition organizer Nicola Eremita, 348 Island Highway, said Thursday, he is far from satisfied with the minister's reply.

"We have had some terrible accidents on this road. Last year two small boys were killed. Not too long ago another young person was killed when his car left the highway and hit a pole.

★ ★ ★

"The bloodshed here is just sickening, and I dread what might happen next when I watch the children walking to school on that narrow road, without even a sidewalk."

Mr. Eremita suggested that a new road could be built running beside the E and N Railway from the bottom of the Four-Mile Hill to the Thetis underpass.

In the petition, he said "the number of accidents on this roadway, many of which are probably unreported and do not come to the notice of your department, is unbelievably high."

The petition asked for particular attention to the Four-Mile Hill, which is narrow and curved.

"This section for many years past has been considered highly dangerous, and it is in order to rectify this situation that the petitioners have asked me to present this petition," he said in the letter.

★ ★ ★

"Within the past year two school children have been killed on this highway at this particular point and a number of adults also have lost their lives due to the narrow curving road and the absence of a sidewalk."

Mr. Eremita pointed out that there are two school zones on the highway.

Replying to the petition, Highways Minister Black conceded that traffic counts have been fairly heavy in recent years on the highway, particularly on weekends.

"When the new Trans-Canada Highway section between Victoria and Goldstream was opened, traffic on 1A dropped to half of what it had been originally," he said.

"It is true, however, that it has increased considerably since that time."

Recreation Vote Again

Oak Bay Bid: Small Outlay, Big Dividends

If taxpayers approve, Oak Bay could get an ice arena, swimming pool, library and senior citizens centre for next to nothing, Mayor Fred Hawes said Thursday.

A referendum on the recreation centre, which will cost $1,250,000 to build, will be held probably in December, he added.

A firm date will be set at the next council meeting Sept. 22.

Mayor Hawes said he expects the needed money will be raised from the sale of municipally owned land.

INTEREST RATES

A previous referendum was defeated in April 1964, and Mayor Hawes blamed its failure on high interest rates and the large amount of money to be borrowed.

Land has already been acquired for a senior citizens centre and branch library near Oak Bay Avenue between Monterey and Hampshire, and an ice arena and swimming pool is planned off Foul Bay Road behind a new shopping centre.

It is expected at least $1,000,000 will be raised from the sale of land at Cedar Hill Cross Road, zoned for highrise and apartment development after a stormy public hearing earlier this year.

CASE DISMISSED

The zoning was challenged in a Supreme Court case brought by Oak Bay Ratepayers' president Conrad Watling and Percival Bragg, 3544 Henderson. The case was dismissed.

The municipality also owns other land, which will be sold to offset the building costs, Mayor Hawes said.

Mayor Hawes said it may not be necessary to put a money referendum to the taxpayers, but he feels they should be able to express their opinion on whether or not the money should be used for recreation.

Warm Pictures Of Emily Carr

By BILL THOMAS

Emily Carr and her painting companion Edythe Hembroff-Schleicher enjoyed the same talents. Both women painted and both were able writers.

Mrs. Schleicher has demonstrated her talents in a book published Thursday. She is being honored with an exhibition, which opened the same day, at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria showing a broad spectrum of her work as an artist.

In her book M.E., A Portrayal of Emily Carr, Mrs. Schleicher has made no attempt at an analysis of the art of Emily Carr but has rather concentrated on the warm and close relationship the two women enjoyed starting in the spring of 1930.

★ ★ ★

The title M.E. is taken from the signature Emily Carr frequently used to sign her paintings. Asked by the author what the M stood for, Emily Carr replied "it doesn't stand for anything. I was born just plain Emily. But because I had two sisters who were both Es (Edith and Elizabeth) I added the M to distinguish myself from them."

This is a thoroughly feminine book that shows some of the personality of British Columbia's foremost female painter.

★ ★ ★

Emily Carr had trouble meeting her payments on her sewing machine. She had small vanities—she wanted a fresh dress when the two women were doing portraits of each other. She had a passion for her pets and she couldn't suffer fools.

The fact that Mrs. Schleicher is a talented painter and her abilities were recognized and appreciated by Emily Carr give the episodes and insights a weight that lifts them above mere trivia and nostalgia.

M.E. will undoubtedly be treasured by art historians of the future who want to know what the painter was "really like." It was natural that Emily Carr should be interested in a young woman who had studied at the same schools as she but it is remarkable, in the light of Emily's personality, that the relationship lasted.

★ ★ ★

The book also includes a series of letters from Emily Carr to Mrs. Schleicher marking the first time any of the letters have been published.

M.E. contains some interesting word pictures of the older woman sitting surrounded by great trees sitting back smoking a cigarette, meditating and plotting her work.

The book is not an attempt at history, it is rather a warm personal account of the details in this great woman's life during the years of a close working relationship.

★ ★ ★

Much of the book was written at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria while Mrs. Schleicher did volunteer work Saturday mornings.

The exhibition of Mrs. Schleicher's work includes some of her early prize-winning paintings and also a portrait of Emily Carr. There is an interesting oil showing the painter of her caravan, which she called Elephant, and her small menagerie.

★ ★ ★

M.E. is an important book artistically but yet more important it is thoroughly readable. It will be readily appreciated by all those who knew Emily Carr and by those who have come to know her through her work.

Three-Car Crash

Death Raises Road Toll to 13

Greater Victoria suffered its thirteenth traffic fatality of the year Thursday when a passenger in a car involved in a three-car collision at Rose and Bay died.

Mrs. Florence Rutley, 69, of 406-905 Burdett, died a few hours after she was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital suffering internal injuries and shock.

She had been a passenger in a car driven by her husband, John, 65, when the car collided with a pickup truck driven by 17-year-old Robert Justice of 7365 Seabrook, Central Saanich, just before 4 p.m.

The Rutley car had been travelling south on Rose Street and the Justice vehicle was moving west on Bay Street.

After the truck was in collision with the Rutley car it careened left and struck a car driven by Mrs. Phyllis Patterson of 2201 Chambers. The Patterson vehicle was stopped at Rose while travelling east on Bay.

Mrs. Rutley, who had been confined to a wheelchair for several years with arthritis, is survived by her husband.

The truck was a total loss and the Rutley car suffered damages of about $1,500. The Patterson vehicle suffered minor damages.

Reward: Watch It Work

Apprentices at the Fleet School at Esquimalt got their reward for good work Thursday when they watched children at the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children using therapeutic equipment built for the clinic by the apprentices.

Lt.Cmdr. Bruce Wilson and seven of the trainees culminated their project for the clinic by meeting and helping the children work with badly-needed equipment.

The clinic, which was built mainly by personal contributions and pledges, lacked funds for specialized equipment. The Fleet School volunteered to build some of the equipment, and collected donations from ships and shore establishments in the area and civilian personnel at HMC Dockyard.

One of the projects was a manually-operated therapeutic treadmill to help children walk.

A logic circuit game made of eight electronically controlled and different colored boxes with blocks to fit the appropriate holes was a second project. When the blocks are properly placed, a tape recorder plays a tape encouraging the child.

A jungle gym made of ramps, steps, tunnels and ladders was the third piece of equipment made by the Fleet School.

The equipment was ready when the clinic opened, but most of the trainees hadn't had the opportunity to see it in action.

"They wanted to meet the children who will be using it," Cmdr. Wilson said.

Building materials for the machines only came to $800, and $1,200 was collected during the fund drive, so the Fleet School presented the remaining $400 to the clinic two weeks ago, Cmdr. Wilson said.

RCMP Witness

Lawyers Clash Over Testimony

By ALAN ANDERSON

Counsel for defence and prosecution clashed in Victoria provincial Court Thursday over the testimony of RCMP Constable Gerald O'Neil, who was giving evidence about a narcotics squad raid on a party in a Gorge Road home.

"I'm not getting the full story from you. I want all the evidence," said defence lawyer Robert Price to the constable.

Special prosecutor E. S. Pollard rose to object. "That kind of remark is not called for," he said.

TWO OCCASIONS

"I'm afraid it is," retorted Mr. Price. "I have found with this witness before now that all the evidence does not come out.

"Your Honor will remember on at least two occasions, not very far back, that this man did not give all the evidence until he was brought to do so under cross examination, and because of that the case was dismissed."

Judge Ostler allowed the questioning to proceed, and Mr. Price turned back to Constable O'Neil.

ANSWER REQUESTED

"Now, sir. Will you answer my question, please?"

"Will you repeat it?" asked the witness.

"If you would only listen, I wouldn't have to," said Mr. Price.

The questioning concerned the way in which the RCMP officers obtained a piece of evidence — a pipe, which they said contained hashish — in the case against Richard E. Shaw, who was charged with possession of narcotics.

SHAW'S HOME

Constable O'Neil had testified that he and Constable George Kuich went to the front door of Shaw's home at 12 Gorge Road West at 10 p.m. July 14, while a third RCMP officer went to the back door.

In the living room among a number of other people he saw Shaw sitting with a pipe in his hand, and he walked over and held out his hand. He said Shaw put the pipe into his hand, but then tried to take it back again.

"What did you do then?" asked Mr. Price. "Was that when the physical violence occurred?"

"I don't consider it physical violence. I protected the exhibit, that's all," replied the constable.

"You shoved him into a chair so hard you broke the chair and knocked a hole in the wall, didn't you?"

"Yes," replied the constable. "And you don't call that physical violence?"

AFTER PAUSE

After a pause, the constable replied: "I don't know how to describe physical violence."

"Perhaps you should," said Mr. Price.

The prosecutor objected to that remark, and it was at this point that the two lawyers skirmished over Mr. Price's line of questioning.

When he returned to the constable, Mr. Price dropped the "physical violence" issue and asked whether the constable had agreed to pay for the damage caused in Shaw's home.

PAYMENT WANTED

The constable said he did not remember saying that, agreed that Shaw had later come to see him about payment, and he had told him to see senior RCMP officers about it.

Asked what their search of the house had uncovered, Const. O'Neil said: "Drugwise, only the pipe." He said if there had been liquor in the house, he would not have paid attention to it.

He described Shaw's behavior as "jovial, the way people get when they're high."

TESTIMONY DIFFERS

Constable Kuich's testimony differed from Constable O'Neil's in several details.

He said Const. O'Neil had taken the pipe away from Shaw, not had it handed to him.

He said Shaw had not been "jovial," and that he had been upset over the way the police had entered the house.

"He wanted to know why we hadn't shown a search warrant, kept saying 'what's happened to justice' and things like that."

The case will be resumed Sept. 17 for testimony from Henry Ho, food and drug director in Vancouver.

Anglers Presumed Drowned

The search for two men missing off the coast of Sooke since Monday was abandoned Thursday afternoon and Sooke RCMP said the men were presumed drowned.

The men were identified as R. D. Polson, 34, of 2269 Newman, and Able Seaman Z. G. Smith, 20, of 5094 Wesley.

Mr. Polson was a maintenance man with School District 61 and Mr. Smith served aboard HMCS St. Croix.

The two were reported missing Monday evening when they failed to return to the resort they had left at 4 p.m. for a few hours fishing.

A 12-foot aluminum skiff, believed to belong to the men, was found floating upside down in a kelp bed near Whiffin Spit Tuesday, but officials said there was no indication of what might have happened.

Extortion Case Hearing Delayed Indefinitely

Harold Reksten, 31, will not appear in court in the foreseeable future to answer an extortion charge brought against him a month ago.

★ ★ ★

In Provincial Court Thursday, the prosecution asked for a stay of proceedings because Reksten has been certified and sent to a mental hospital.

Reksten, the holder of a Norwegian passport, was charged Aug. 2 with attempting to extort $120,000 from Douglas J. Remery, 3215 Ripon.

He was arrested when Oak Bay police went with Lemery to a rendezvous with Reksten in Windsor Park, and the next day he attempted suicide by slashing his wrists in his jail cell.

Reksten was held under guard in St. Joseph's Hospital until Aug. 7, when he was remanded to Riverview Mental Hospital for one month for a medical report.

★ ★ ★

The stay of proceedings allows the prosecution to reopen the case later—or, at its discretion, to drop the charges.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Readers: Remember the letter from the physician's wife who said doctors make the world's worst husbands? She confessed she believed (when she was young and foolish) that if she married a doctor she'd have someone to look after her when she became ill.

"The closest thing I get to medical attention from my husband," she moaned, "is instructions to go look in the top drawer of his desk where he throws his samples. There is always plenty of stuff in there and I'm supposed to take what I need."

Additional complaints: If the children get sick at night, doctor-husband refuses to call another doctor because he hates to bother a friend. His friends don't mind bothering him, however, his wife asserted. Frequently he is awakened at all hours of the night and he never refuses to get dressed and go.

The disenchanted wife closed by saying, "When I was a dewey-eyed romantic coed I thought it would be wonderful to be married to a professional man. And I still do, but I wish I had married a lawyer." She signed her letter G.P.'s Mate.

I told G.P.'s Mate her letter should be answered by a doctor's wife and I did not qualify. I invited the wives of physicians to respond and promised to print the best letter. The results were staggering. Since it was virtually impossible to make a decision, I opted in favor of printing the best lines from the top five letters. Here they are:

From Cincinnati: That doctor's wife who thinks she should have married a lawyer can have mine. He hasn't had dinner home two nights in a row since he passed the bar nine years ago.

From Battle Creek, Michigan: Tell G.P.'s mate to quit griping. I have the same problem with my husband and he's no doctor. He's a carpenter. Our house is falling down and I can't get him to pick up a hammer. For six months I've been begging him to fix the roof but he is "too busy." All husbands are the same, Ann Landers — heroes to the outside world and bums to their own families.

From Washington, D.C.: I'm married to a Certified Public Accountant. So who do you think does the income tax in our family? You guessed it, — little ol' me — a high school dropout.

From Omaha, Nebraska: If that G.P.'s mate thinks she'd be better off married to a psychiatrist tell her to forget it. Every time I look sideways my husband tells me I am compensating, transferring, projecting or hallucinating. His Royal Highness was so busy last month I had to make an appointment (under an assumed name) to discuss our six-year-old son who still wets his pants.

From St. Louis: If that lonely G.P.'s wife lives in our town please tell her to call my husband. He's a minister. I can promise her that he'll give her as much time as she wants — especially if she is attractive. Meanwhile, back at the parsonage I'd give anything to hear an adult voice. I have no car, no money, no decent clothes, no social life and no family life. When I get to feeling so depressed and lonely that I can't stand it anymore, guess who I call? My doctor. He is just wonderful.

U.S. Study:

Clots, Pill Linked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who use oral contraceptives are four times more likely to suffer blood clots than women who do not, a United States government advisory committee reported Thursday.

But the Food and Drug Administration advisory group said the oral contraceptives appear to meet American federal safety requirements because their benefits exceed the risk.

The group's study of 175 matched pairs of women in five cities is the first major American survey linking blood clots to oral contraceptive pills.

★ ★ ★

The findings parallel those of several Bruish studies that reported a seven to 10 times greater clot risk for pill users.

The committee's investigators, headed by Dr. Philip Sartwell of John's Hopkins University, Baltimore, said the clot danger is heightened with so-called sequential formulations.

With sequential preparations, the female hormone estrogen is administered alone for part of the menstrual cycle, then combined with another hormone for the remainder.

★ ★ ★

Other oral contraceptives combine the two hormones at all times.

The study said "excess risk did not persist after cessation of use, nor did prolonged continuation of use enhance the risk."

The committee concluded that the clot danger from the pill is relatively small; only three deaths in every 100,000 per year among women of child-bearing age can be attributed to contraceptive-caused clots.

★ ★ ★

This adds "slightly less than 3 per cent to the age-specific mortality in users of these drugs," says the committee summary prepared by Dr. Louis Hellman of the State University of New York at Brooklyn.

Other effects of the pill on such organs as the liver, thyroid, adrenal glands and kidneys appear to pose no serious health hazard, the committee said.

The study was of married women between the ages of 15 and 44 who had been in hospital with acute illnesses.

Safer Driving Good Excuse For Miniskirt Behind Wheel

By VICTORIA BERGSTROM
Copley News Service

If a lady has been looking for an excuse to wear a miniskirt, how about because it may help her to be a safer driver?

The way a woman is dressed when driving the family car is bound to have an influence on how she drives. We all know that what we wear influences our attitude and our self-confidence.

Any woman who drives realizes that when she learned to drive, she learned to sit correctly. The driver sits back farther in the seat than one would if relaxing as a passenger.

The short fuller skirt is ideal for this. It allows for comfort and freedom of movement and still helps her look feminine and keep her modesty. Pant dresses or culottes and a blouse or sweater would also fill this bill.

★ ★ ★

We have all seen the woman who incessantly tugs at her sheath as it creeps upward. She will do the same thing when she is at the wheel. So she is not giving her full attention to the changing traffic situation. An A-line or full skirt would answer this problem.

William Best and Robert McCluskey, owners of driver training schools, and Morgan Homfeldt, a safety education director, have ideas on what is safe and unsafe attire for driving.

Officer Homfeldt cautioned against wearing a wide brim hat when driving, particularly if the brim is downward, as it will cut visibility.

He said that bell bottom pants may interfere with the brake pedal and the giant rings may become caught in the horn rims of some cars. McCluskey would second that latter thought. "No fancy jewellery. You are working" when driving, McCluskey said.

Scarves are popular this season. But don't hang them over the rear-view mirror. It is illegal. This also goes for dolls, baby booties and any other large items. But religious medals and medallions are all right.

★ ★ ★

High heels are not a particular concern at the moment but with the House of Dior in Paris declaring that there will be a downward trend in hemlines, there will be a corresponding hightening of heels.

A few years ago the stiletto heels were catching on the car floor mats and on the accelerator but today's square heels are less likely to do so.

Best has very definite opinions on how a woman should be dressed for driving. He nixes loafers, sandals and tennis shoes. They don't let you have the necessary sensitivity, he said. He is all for driving with a higher heel. "A higher heel gives support on the floor of the car."

Another thing you might put on when you get there is your gloves. Leave the nylon, cotton and other slippery fabric gloves off until you reach your destination.

If you like gloves for driving, keep a special driving pair in the glove compartment.

The new cars have some good safety features, such as protected door handles, but still be careful with bracelets and with wide sleeves. They can catch on the turn signal or the shift lever.

Had a letter from Wynne Shaw from London the other day and it has taken me all that time to decipher even part of it. In her own words, "If you can't read my writing (and who can?) maybe my sister could interpret!"

Excerpts from Wynne's letter: "We have survived five weeks on our own —

three strenuous weeks at Royal Academy of Dancing Summer Course. I am taking the teachers' section and such marvellous teachers as three of my students, Madeline Ponich, Colleen De Corte and Gillian Regehr, are having wonderful courses with Dame Ninette de Valois of the Royal Ballet, Marian Lane and Peter Clegg of the Company, John Field, ballet master of Royal Ballet and Miss Louise Browne, director of the school.

Dame Ninette de Valois has given two lecture demonstrations and on both occasions chose two girls to demonstrate for her. The first lecture our Madeline (Ponich) was chosen and the second lecture both girls chosen were Colleen De Corte and Gillian Regehr.

"You can guess that teacher Wynne Shaw was pretty proud!

"Now the dancers have been chosen for the performance to be given next week an our Victoria girls are right in there.

"Gillian is dancing Prayer in Ballet Coppelia. Madeline and Colleen, alternating in the Peasant Dance from Swan Lake and with another couple are dancing the Spanish Dance from Swan Lake and all three Victorians are dancing in another part of Swan Lake. All three are also dancing in corps de ballet from Giselle and with three others are also dancing in Coppelia extracts.

"All these dances numbers have been learned in under three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Matthews, 4420 Wilkinson Road, recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at a quiet family gathering.

They were married in Eastbourne, Sussex, England and came to Canada the same year. Victoria has been their home ever since.

Their son, Mr. L. W. Matthews, lives in Edmonton and their daughter, Mrs. Jack Conolly lives here. They also have six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Quiet Benefactor

Artist, Dramatist Mourned

By JAMES K. NESBITT

Mrs. W. Lloyd Morgan, who died in Victoria a few days ago, at 73, after a residence here of nearly 60 years, has left many examples of her brilliant workmanship in the creative arts.

She was born in Spokane, Jan. 23, 1896, daughter of John T. O'Brien, well-known newspaper man there and in Victoria. Her mother survives, at 96.

★ ★ ★

As Mary Ellen O'Brien, Mrs. Morgan attended St. Ann's Academy here, specializing in music and painting. She went to Victoria High School, and graduated from the old Provincial Normal School at Mount Tolmie, being on staff of Willows School for a year before her marriage in 1917 to a son of a prominent Spokane family. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan celebrated their golden wedding two years ago.

★ ★ ★

Mrs. Morgan was a dramatist of note in the 1930's, when she organized The Priory Players and wrote for them several plays for appearance in drama festivals, chief of which were Influence, a social drama, Sa Mate, a tragedy, A la Boccaccio, a comedy, and Through Other Eyes, all receiving high praise from the adjudicators.

She was an organizer of the Victoria Operatic Society of the 1930's, and a founding member of the Craigdarroch Castle Preservation Society in 1959. She did much work for the Multiple Sclerosis Society, and for the last 20 years she and her husband opened their beautiful gardens on Pemberton Road for the crippled.

★ ★ ★

Only a month ago Mrs. Morgan was the usual gracious hostess at the 1969 party. She was always willing to open her home to literary and charitable organizations.

Mrs. Morgan was one of the few local experts in the restoration of old oil paintings, being highly recommended in this regard by Victoria Art Gallery, of which she was a long-time member.

★ ★ ★

One of her outstanding restoration jobs was that of a large oil of Queen Victoria, which had hung in a Metchosin schoolhouse, and used by the youngsters as a dartboard during many years. Mrs. Morgan, in a two-year undertaking was able to bring it back to its original state. It was displayed to the public in the 1962 centennial, and now hangs in Dingle House on Gorge Road.

Despite long periods of frail health, Mrs. Morgan was always at work. She embroidered magnificent tapestries of historical significance and they now are collectors' pieces.

★ ★ ★

She was a person of many parts. As businesswoman she operated her home The Priory, as a guest house during the Second World War, and she assisted her husband in his fuel firm of some years back.

When her husband was an alderman, Mrs. Morgan was one of the civic hostesses during many important visits to Victoria — chief of which were those of the President of the United States and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1937, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in 1939.

Mary Ellen Morgan

She possessed deep human understanding, and did much social work, locally in the John Howard Society and as a matron in a California women's prison. In the Second World War, she worked in the Knights of Columbus canteen here.

★ ★ ★

Her manuscripts on British Columbia history are a valuable part of the provincial scene. One of her chief works was the life of Julia Apnaut, who had been carried over the Cariboo trail in 1861 in a basket strapped to her mother's pony.

She also notated the colorful life of George "Rebel" Mowat, Victoria's best known and most colorful sightseeing bus driver, a local, warm-hearted character, who died a year ago in Ireland while on a world tour after his retirement.

Some years ago Mrs. Morgan wrote a book of verse for children. At the time Colonist columnist G. E. Mortimore wrote: "Mary Ellen Morgan, a Victoria grandmother, has just had published a charming book of children's verse in the A. A. Milne tradition, but with a local flavor.

"Mrs. Morgan's book, In Our House, is pleasantly illustrated by the author's own drawings. The verses are built around the author's grandchildren, and their world of home, sea and garden.

"It does not shine with a professional slickness, but the book is fresh, simple and sweet.

"This is Mrs. Morgan's first attempt at a book for children. A former social worker, she previously wrote a book on her experiences in the California state women's reformatory."

★ ★ ★

She was a lifelong member of the congregation of St. Patrick's Church at Willows, dating back to the days when the church first opened as Our Lady of Lourdes.

She did work for Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals, St. Mary's Priory at Colwood, the Franciscan Friary in Joan Crescent, and Poor Clares convent. Her quiet benefactions to her community were munificent. She was always helping some lame dog over the stile.

★ ★ ★

Mrs. Morgan, much mourned, leaves besides her husband and her mother, two sons, Lloyd, Seattle; John Daniel, of Whidbey Island; a daughter, Mrs. George Plaxton, London, Ont.; a brother, John O'Brien, Taft, Calif.; and 18 grandchildren. A brother and three sisters predeceased her — Dr. Louis O'Brien of the University of California; Catherine, Betty and Patricia.

Noise Protest Stalls Water

BALLOCH, Scotland (Reuters)—Work on a $29,000,000 water supply plant at nearby Loch Lomond has come to a halt because the noise is affecting the health of a 63-year-old woman. The court has banned work on the plan to supply water to central Scotland while it considers a noise abatement case brought by Ruth Murray, who lives 100 yards from the construction cite.

Garbage Holds Small Fortune

ADELAIDE, Australia (Reuters)—A storekeeper, clawing with his hands in a garbage dump found a shopping bag holding almost $10,000. He himself had thrown it on the heap more than six hours earlier, thinking it was rubbish. His wife forgot to put it in the bank.

Unilingualists Vow Legal Action

MONTREAL (CP) — A French unilingualist group involved in Wednesday's violence at suburban St. Leonard says it is planning legal action against Mayor Leo Ouellet because of inadequate police protection.

Raymond Lemieux, head of the Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire which organized a meeting Wednesday to discuss action against the proposed opening of an English private school, told a news conference Thursday:

"Two weeks ago, he (the mayor) warned the government of possible violence. Knowing this, he should have organized better protection."

ENGLISH BLAMED

Mr. Lemieux blamed the violence on English-Canadians opposed to the "national interests" of French-speaking Quebecers.

"It is only the English who stand to gain anything from the struggle, not the Italians or any other immigrant group."

Immigrants to Quebec will have to be assimilated into the French-speaking group, he said.

"It is costing the Quebec people $500,000,000 each year to accept the immigrants that settle, here, and 85 per cent of them are blending in with the English sector of the population.

"It is not that we are anti-Italian but simply that continued immigration is conflicting with the national interests of the province."

Mr. Lemieux said the LIS would hold another public meeting next Wednesday and the group would set up "our own measures of security."

MAYOR CHARGES

Mayor Ouellet charged Thursday that the Quebec government doesn't want to do anything about the suburb's school crisis.

A provincial police riot squad had to move into a high school auditorium to help local police stop a pitched battle between adherents of a "French-only movement and people who want their children educated in English.

Two persons were arrested and several injured.

Mr. Ouellet said the provincial government has the power to settle the year-long dispute over the use of English in the municipality's Roman Catholic schools, but "it apparently doesn't want to."

School opening in St. Leonard, an east-end suburb of 35,000 population, has been postponed until Monday. Schools elsewhere in Quebec opened Wednesday.

Car Safety Bill Ready

FREDERICTON (CP) — Legislation laying down at least 20 safety standards for car manufacturers will be presented to Parliament during the fall session, Transport Minister Don Jamieson told a news conference here Thursday.

Jamieson declined to release details on the legislation but said it had been approved by representatives of all provinces.

Lawyers

Divorce Motions Passed

OTTAWA (CP) — Lawyers at the Canadian Bar Association's annual meeting here Thursday passed a spate of resolutions aimed at filling chinks in the new Divorce Act.

More than 15 members of the association's family law section discussed ways of clarifying various clauses in the revised law passed in 1968.

The resolutions still must be voted on by the association's plenary session. If approved there, they would be sent to federal and provincial justice authorities.

THE PAYMENTS

A contentious issue was a proposal to permit a court to make orders for corollary relief—such as maintenance payments to a spouse either at the time of the divorce or later on.

Myrna Bowman, a Winnipeg lawyer, strongly opposed the provision, saying that it "could be used as a club by the wife."

The purpose of the Divorce Act is to sever relationships, Mrs. Bowman said. It should be determined at the time of the divorce whether a spouse is entitled to maintenance payments.

LATER STEP

Other lawyers supported the resolution, finally approved, on the grounds that a spouse not entitled to maintenance if capable of fully maintaining himself or herself at the time of divorce should not be barred from claiming maintenance later if necessary.

The lawyers also decided that direct mention of "physical or mental cruelty" should be eliminated from the section of the act setting out the grounds for divorce.

They would like to see it changed to read that the respondent in a divorce case "has conducted himself in such a manner as to render intolerable the continued cohabitation of the spouses."

National Income Revised

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's gross national product this year may reach nearly $78,000,000,000 on the basis of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics revision of the country's national accounts, informants said Thursday.

A finance department source said the new national income and expenditure accounts give the government's economists firmer grounds on which to predict future trends in tax revenues and expenditures.

But the new figures do not change Finance Minister Edgar Benson's June 3 budget forecast that the gross national product —the total value of all goods and services produced by Canada—will grow this year by nine per cent over 1968 figures.

DBS's original report on the GNP was $67,368,000,000, and on that basis gross national product this year should top $73,000,000,000.

Rain Ends Service Of Water Bombers

All government-leased water-bomber aircraft ceased operations Thursday with the announcement from the B.C. Forest Service that the forest fire picture no longer poses a serious threat.

W. C. Phillips, chief protection officer, in issuing the final daily forest report said that rain and lower temperatures had resulted in a nil to moderate hazard condition throughout the province, "and unless there is an upsurge in fires the water bombers won't be recalled."

Detour Defender

When workmen in Des Plaines, Illinois came to cut down evergreen trees outside home of Mrs. Opal Spindler to make way for sidewalk extension, they were blocked by Mrs. Spindler. Police had a struggle to remove her, as shown here. Trees were not on Mrs. Spindler's property, but she had asked in vain that sidewalk be built around them.—(AP)

Street Vending Will Get Test

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—The British Columbia Civil Liberties Association Saturday will challenge New Westminster City Council's interpretation of a by-law that prohibits "distributing any chattels, goods, wares or merchandise of any nature" in the street.

D. S. Sigurgeirson, counsel to the association, said he believes the bylaw cannot be applied to newspapers or other publications as it would abridge freedom of speech and press and encroach on federal authority.

And so, on Saturday, members of the Civil Liberties Association will distribute newspapers and other publications.

If charged under the bylaw, the association said it will pursue the matter in the courts, seeking a judicial declaration that the bylaw cannot apply to the distribution of newspapers and other publications.

Sociological Study:

Anti-Jew Beliefs Strong in U.S.

By GEORGE GETZE
Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

SAN FRANCISCO — One of three Americans accepts anti-Jewish beliefs, a University of California at Berkeley research investigator reported Thursday.

Dr. Gertrude Selznick, a lecturer in sociology, said whether a person accepts the anti-Semitic beliefs depends on his education.

"There is a positive mathematic correlation," she said at a press conference.

THIRD GRADE

"If you've got a third-grade education you accept more of the old beliefs derogatory to Jews than if you've got a fourth grade education. If you've finished high school you believe fewer of them than those who quit school after Grade 8."

Dr. Selznick was a speaker at the 64th annual meeting of the American Sociology Association. She and Stephen Stenberg have just published a book on anti-Semitism in the United States. The Tenacity of Prejudice.

She said anti-Jewish feeling is declining in the United States, but not by much. A third of the people now think Jews are shady businessmen, for instance, while 25 years ago about half of them thought so.

MOST COMMON

According to Selznick, the most common items in the package of anti-Semitic beliefs are that Jews are shady businessmen, that Jews control American big business and that they are selfish and clannish.

She said logic means nothing to people who accept such generalizations as the truth.

For instance, people can believe all Jews are radicals bent on the destruction of capitalism and still think Jews control American business.

"Anti-Semitism is more than ordinary ethnic prejudice," Selznick said.

"It's a lot more vicious than that. You can say all Irishmen are drunkards and all Scotchmen tightwads but you don't want to shove them into gas ovens," she said.

According to a survey she and Stenberg made, about 52 per cent of the American public think all Jews are clannish.

Thirty-five per cent think they are unethical and shady dealers. Another 35 per cent, probably the same ones, think Jews have too much power in business.

Town's Water Cut Off

Eager Beaver Had Help

DELANSON, N.Y. (AP) — Delanson's persistent beaver, harassed by government agents, helped by kids who want to stay out of school and tired of seeing his work destroyed, fled Thursday to a calmer pond.

He left behind a minor water emergency in this northern New York state village.

The beaver had tried to homestead a creek that connects a reservoir with the Delanson water system. His dams all but shut off water service, and Thursday the 500 villagers were ordered to boil their drinking water because low pressure caused by the last beaver dam turned off an automatic chlorinator.

For 10 days village officials, aided by Vernon Bailey, a trapper for the state conservation department, tried to stop the beaver. They broke up dams, only to have them rise again. They set traps that were shunned or sprung.

One trap was found with a rock dropped in its trip lever. That indicated the beaver had allies.

"The beaver is not springing those traps," said John Whelan, a conservation department game manager. "The school kids are.

"They don't want to go back to school."

The beaver dams cut off water to the local school and classes were cancelled. School opened for half a day Thursday with all drinking fountains turned off.

A spokesman for the department said investigators also had learned that children had helped the beaver build his first dam, but with "no idea they were blocking the water supply."

Bailey said the beaver didn't like the traps or having his dams dismantled.

"There were a lot of people up there bothering him."

Brake Valves Faulty

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) —Three major Australian automobile manufacturers will spend close to $70,000 to replace a faulty brake valve in nearly 20,000 cars, it was learned Thursday. The tiny valve, worth about 67 cents, is used in power-boosted disc and drum-braking systems supplied under contract to Australian car manufacturers.

Plan Uneconomic?

Colquitz Cost Could Double

Estimates for the purchase of land by Saanich municipality for the proposed Colquitz Open Space Plan are low, Comptroller Treasurer John Tribe told a special meeting of council Wednesday night.

The figures are contained in an economic study prepared by Reid, Crowther & Partners Limited, consulting engineers, of Vancouver.

The special council meeting was called to confer with John Dobie of Winnipeg, senior economist of the company's planning division, and M. B. Pierce of Vancouver, company engineer.

Mr. Tribe said the ultimate scheme is "wonderful if we could do it." He said this would mean the outlay of several million dollars to acquire hundreds of acres of land.

"I wish we had $5,000,000 to buy the land as recommended," he said. "We've bought $1,500,000 worth of land in the last few years: $5,000,000 would be quite an outlay. The figures in the report are low and could actually be doubled soon."

Some of the land, if bought by Saanich, would be made available for building lots.

Ald. William Campbell said it would be unwise "at this time to create a lot of lots to compete with the sewer enterprise when we're told we have enough for 20 years in the sewer enterprise area."

Ald. Alan Newberry said "we come down to the crunch of dollars and we come to the point where we present to the people a plan and a report which says the plan is uneconomic. It's ludicrous. I believe we should abandon, regretfully, the development comples.

An Alberta firm is to provide the campsite living facilities near Sooke for 240 workers who will be employed on the B.C. Hydro's new power dam and powerhouse above the Jordan River.

The contract has been awarded to Prebuilt Rentals Ltd. of Calgary and Edmonton by Emil Anderson Construction Ltd. of Hope, B.C. who are the main contractors on the big job.

The 50 buildings being made by Prebuilt at Lethbridge at a cost of $250,000 are to be railed to Langford, then trucked to Jordan River.

Jail Meals

Prisoner Beefs 'Scarce'

There have been only two complaints about prisoners' meals in the past year, Chief Jack Gregory told members of the Victoria Police Commission Wednesday.

Both were from prisoners who were being held in jail here for about a week. They thought the meals monotonous.

Peacock Restaurant, which has been supplying the food, was awarded an increase. Breakfast allowance went up from 65 to 85 cents, lunch from 75 to $1.05 and dinner from 85 to $1.25.

SEVEN PROMOTIONS

There were seven promotions within the force.

To be probationer second class are Richard Mitchell, John Lane and Thomas Sibbald.

To be probationer third class are Peter Lund, Harvey Stevenson, Nelson Stephen.

To be first class is Thomas Braiden.

Formal acceptance was given the report on salaries recently returned by the provincial mediation commission.

Chief Gregory will attend a chief constables' convention in Edmonton from Sunday to Sept. 12.

Anyone Seen Basenji Named Spot?

Spot doesn't care for dog hotels. His owner Barbara Steffler, 1988 Ernest, put the two-year-old Basenji in a kennel while she went for a week-long holiday but he jumped the fence and hasn't been seen since.

He went missing Aug. 16 but now his owner wants him back. Spot is brown and white and is not fond of strangers. A woman thought she saw him near Centennial Pool not far from a kennel on the Old Island Highway where he was boarding while his owner went for a week of holidays at Campbell River.

Anyone who sees Spot is asked to phone 592-6496 or the SPCA who are also looking for him.

U.S. ratings make or break most of the shows Victoria watches, and I think most Victorians have long been aware they have no impact at all on those same ratings. But something I didn't know is that the Neilsens, most powerful figures of all, haven't even included Seattle until now.

A New York report says Nielsen will expand its ratings from 30 major U.S. markets to 70 as of the start of the new U.S. season. The 30 covered about half the people of the U.S., while the 70 will raise that to about 70 per cent.

Seattle is by far the largest of the new 40 in the Nielsens. Others include Tulsa, Spokane, Duluth, Oklahoma City, Green Bay, Syracuse, Little Rock, Rochester, Chattanooga and Sacramento. Not one ever had any affect on ratings before. Fantastic.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Thursday's tumbleweed answer — Biographies make fascinating reading for me, and the best include A King's Story, Duke of Windsor; The Fabulous Showman, Phineas Taylor Barnum; My Lord What a Morning, Marian Anderson, and The Day They Shook the Plum Tree, Hetty Green. She was the world's richest and most miserly woman. A doll.

Today's question ends this biographical line. Identify the subjects of the books Beau James, My Life in Court, Lady Sings the Blues and The Last Billionaire. Another motley crew, who shall be named Saturday.

". . . With light to moderate showers of meteorite particles on the Sea of Tranquility."

Friday Highlights

C-3:04 p.m.—Art Linkletter ends his long daytime run, to which I add a warning that several CBS soap operas will be at different times Monday—7, 12.

C-7:30—A special on footballer O. J. Simpson—5.

● C-8:30—Another case of two great shows clashing. This one is 90 minutes of pianist Artur Rubenstein, some talk but mostly music, by Beethoven, Brahms, Chopin, Schumann and Prokofieff—5.

● 8:30—Right against Rubenstein is Net playhouse's gift to us of the movie Devi, by India's Satyajit Ray—9.

Friday Movies

10:00 a.m. — Devil's Disciple (1959, not GBS, but fun). Olivier is delightful, Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas merely amusing. Still, it's the best today—4.

12:45 noon—House of Rothschild (enjoyable 1933 George Arliss). Plus Karloff, Robert and Loretta Young—6, 8.

2:00 p.m.—Doctor's Orders (fair 1935 drama-comedy), John Mills in his younger days. And Felix Aylmer—13.

C-4:00—Tumbleweed (1954 Audie Murphy)—7.

C-7:00—Far Country (1955 western, routine but fair enough), James Stewart, Ruth Roman, many more—7.

C-7:00—California (1947 action, not as good as Far Country), Ray Milland, Barbara Stanwyck—12.

C-8:00 — Purple Plain (fairish 1954 war endurance tale), Gregory Peck, Bernard Lee—8.

9:00—Never on Sunday (1960 Melina Mercouri). One of the few films I walked out of. But many love it—2.

C-9:00—Marnie (1964 suspense, among Hitchcock's poorest), Tippi Hedrin, Sean Connery, Martin Gabel—6.

9:00—The Stripper (1963 young-mature love). Joanne Woodward, a talented doll, turns a turkey into a fair film—7, 12.

11:30—No title available. Some loss—7.

C-11:40—Terror of the Tongs (1960 Christopher Lee). Tongs? Tongs you very much. An old joke—8.

C-11:45—Honeymoon Machine (1961 comedy, not bad), Steve McQueen, Paula Prentiss. Tongs you very much?—2.

11:45—Revolt of the Mamalukes (1964 Omar Sharif). Tongs for nothing—11.

C-12:00—Purple Plain (see 8:00)—6.

1:00 a.m.—Dial 1119 (good 1960 suspense). Daktari's Marshall Thompson is excellent as a mad gunman—4.

1:00—Hoodlum Empire (1951 crime crime), Brian Donlevy, Claire Trevor. As bad as Dial 1119 is good—12.

1:05—New Orleans Uncensored (1955 crime crime). As bad as Hoodlum Empire, except it's got Beverly Garland, which I wish I did—5.

1:30—Black Dragon (1942 Bela Lugosi). Tongs for the memory—7.

1:30—Ghost of St. Michael's (1946 English comedy), Will Hay. Tongs you and good night, folks—13.

Friday Radio

8:05 p.m.—Gala Performance has music from Bach to Offenbach, plus Schubert, Copland, Saint-Saens—CFMS (98.5).

9:00—A recital worth hearing: cellist Zara Nelsova and pianist Grant Johannesen, with music by Beethoven, Chopin and Franck—CBU-FM (105.7).

●—Recommended; C—Color; T—Tongs.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

Alvin Roth of New York has long been noted for his remarkable card-reading flair as well as his many contributions to bridge theory. He displayed this first quality in full measure in this deal from the Team Trials.

West's weak two-bid made it difficult for his opponents to reach an unbeatable game at no trump and Roth landed at four hearts on the South cards. He was fortunate enough to escape a spade lead, which would have wrecked the contract.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	2 ♠	Dbl.
Pass	4 ♡	All pass

Opening lead: Diamond five

Reading West's lead of the diamond five as a singleton, declarer refused the finesse and went right up with dummy's ace. Then he cashed three rounds of clubs, discarding a spade. The next problem was how to tackle the trump suit and Roth, who had now well and truly got the scent, laid down the ace, dropping West's king.

Then he drove out the diamond king. East returning ace and another spade. Declarer ruffed the second spade and cashed two high diamonds, leaving a three-card ending in which he could afford to lose only one more trick.

Dummy was left with J-8-3 of trumps and East with Q-9-7. The declarer held 10-6 of trumps and a diamond, and West's cards were unimportant.

Declarer managed to hold East to one trick by leading a diamond and ruffing with the jack in dummy. Whether East overruffed or not, he could win only the queen of trump.

Handy Tips

The Four O'Clock or Marvel of Peru is a flower not very widely grown these days, which is rather a pity, for it is just as attractive now as when our grandmothers grew it in their cottage gardens. The plants are easy to grow from seeds sown outdoors in the spring, and the big, satin-petalled blossoms bloom in at least seven different colors and shades, all sweetly scented, and all from a 25-cent packet of seed.

It doesn't seem to be generally known that the roots of the Four O'clock can be lifted and stored through the winter, in much the same manner that dahlia tubers are kept from year to year. Buried in a box of peat moss or sand and stored in a cool corner of the basement, the fleshy roots can be planted out again next spring and will give larger plants and earlier flowers than those grown from seed.

★ ★ ★

While I have never tried it myself, I have been told that the roots of the Scarlet Runner bean can be dug up and sorted in the same way, although I can't see there is any particular advantage to be gained in this case.

It is a frustrating experience to have a splendid crop of apples or pears on your backyard trees, only to have one of our autumnal gales come roaring in, littering the ground with bruised and battered fruit.

In earlier days, the only protection we could give our fruit was to spread a good thick layer of straw under the tree to cushion the fall. This is still worthwhile where a good supply of straw is available, but the modern method is to spray the tree with a hormone chemical which causes the fruit to stick to the branches like grim death!

★ ★ ★

The garden centres stock this chemical under such names as Früitone, Kling-Tite, Hormex, Stop-Drop and the like, and it is widely used by commercial holly growers to keep the berries from falling off the harvested branches. For fruit, it is best applied about a week before the normal fruit drop is expected, and the stems of the apples or pears must be thoroughly wetted. It is no good applying a spray falling like the gentle dew of heaven — the tree must have a real drenching.

When the hormone spray is used, you must be sure to pick the fruit at the normal harvest time, or it may become overripe on the tree. Some kinds, like McIntosh and Winesap, may be allowed to stay on until nicely colored, but Delicious tends to turn soft inside if left on the tree 10 days or so after the normal harvest date.

My neigbour Ernie has been trying his hand at growing a row of kohl rabi in his vegetable plot this year, and he is inordinately proud of his plants. Flourishing great things, they are, with swollen, bulb-like stems almost the size of a soccer ball.

I'm afraid Ernie is going to have a bit of a shock when he tries eating them, for such overgrown specimens are utterly useless for the table. Picked small, when not much bigger than an orange, kohl rabi is a delicious vegetable, with a sweet, nutty flavor far superior to turnips, but if you let them get much larger, the roots become hard, hot and woody, more fitted for cattle feed than for human consumption.

The Victoria and District Chrysanthemum Society will be holding its annual Early Chrysanthemum and Dahlia Show this afternoon and tomorrow in the Centennial United Church Hall, 640 Gorge Road. Doors will be open from 2 to 10 p.m. today and from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. tomorrow. Admission is 50 cents.

Navy Does Its Stuff

The decision to put the United States battleship New Jersey back into mothballs caused hardly a ripple. It was as if nobody cared.

But I want to report that a few of us cared, and when I read of the decision to retire the New Jersey after its brief sail off the coast of Vietnam I was heartbroken.

★ ★ ★

It seems as if it was only yesterday the U.S. Navy announced it was taking the New Jersey out of mothballs and refitting her to fight the Viet Cong. Although it would cost $25,000,000 to get her back into fighting shape, surely, I thought, as did so many others, it would be a cheap price to pay to end the war.

For who could doubt that once Ho Chi Minh and his generals heard that the United States was sending a battleship to Vietnam to blast the Commies out of their caves the enemy would have to fold up and go back to Hanoi.

Every day I watched news of the New Jersey's progress. The Navy seemed to be putting all its public relations marbles on the New Jersey going back to war and as each 16-inch gun was readied for action the excitement mounted.

★ ★ ★

The big day came when the New Jersey had her last mothball removed. And as she sailed down the river fireboats sent up geysers of water, ships hooted "bon voyage" and crowds lined the shores waving her on her way.

For the first time the United States had the feeling that things would soon be going well in Vietnam.

The goliath steamed out to sea. As soon as it arrived off North Vietnam it started firing $8,000,000 worth of ammunition into the jungles.

★ ★ ★

For 31 days the New Jersey lobbed its shells into the North. Then President Johnson decided to halt the bombing of North Vietnam and the New Jersey pulled out. It stayed in the area for about six months, using up another $5,000,000 in operating funds.

Eighteen months and $40,000,000 later, the New Jersey was brought back to port to be put in mothballs. It didn't seem possible that the New Jersey's tour of duty was over.

After all, the war was still going on, Paris was stalemated and Hanoi wasn't giving an inch.

But then the Navy explained it all. The New Jersey, according to official sources, had accomplished its mission.

What mission? The mission was for the New Jersey to be demothballed, sent to Vietnam, lob $8,000,000 worth of shells and then be mothballed again.

And for all this it only cost the American taxpayer $40,000,000. That is why I have been upset that there has been no fanfare that the New Jersey is being decommissioned.

★ ★ ★

Everyone always seems to be cheering when a battleship is sent to sea, but where are the flagwavers when she's tied up and covered with grease and canvas?

Unlike most people, I'm not writing the battleship off. You never can tell when the war starts going badly again and for another $25,000,000 we get the New Jersey to go back to sea.

He Prefers Italy

NEW YORK (NANA) — Anthony Quinn, our most virile actor, could be on Broadway singing and dancing any time he likes. He was offered the lead in the forthcoming musicalized La Strada, also the musical version of Lust for Life, for which he won an Oscar. He also could have had Zorba on Broadway, for which he should have won the Oscar when he made the movie. But Tony prefers Italy as a place to live. Of late, he has become rather philosophical. "I have three rules to live by," he told me recently. "Never play poker with a guy named Doc; never eat at a place called Ma's; and never sleep with a dame who stands to lose less than you."

★ ★ ★

Sylva Koscina says she is embarrassed by the in-the-althogether stills for which she posed while starring with Laurence Harvey in He and She. They are now circulating all over Europe, especially in Italy where Sylva should be completing her role with Rock Hudson as a serious German lady army doctor in Hornet's Nest. When actresses get embarrassed about nude photographs, I used to ask myself why did they pose for them in the first place. Now I don't ask. I know the coy modesty is for dear old publicity!

Larry Parks is a big star all over again in England, where the re-released The Jolson Story on the big 70mm screen. It sems a long time ago when no one expressed indignation as Jolson appeared wearing black-face in many of the scenes in the film. There will probably be some protests in the U.S. at the sight of Parks on his knees imploring his mammy to remember her li'l black baby.

Peter Sellers' new picture, Hoffman, which starts this month in London, is described as a "Portnoy's Complaint with taste." What's that?

Marlon Brando and Shelly Winters, I imagine, will be sorry to learn that Mrs. Heather Shipman, the attractive manager of England's famed health hydro, Buxted Park, has been fired from her job — by her husband, who bought the run-down stately home in sussex and spent $2,000,000 dollars to make it the most comfortable rest-and-reducing establishment I have ever seen (and I have seen them all, from Elizabeth Arden's Main Chance in Arizona to the Golden Door near San Diego, California).

It isn't true that Elke Sommer and her writer-husband Joe Hyams have pulled up stakes in Hollywood to live permanently in Europe. Elke has been working in Germany, but they are now in their apartment in Madrid for a few weeks. Then back to Hollywood. Joe has written a new book, Accomplice to the Crime, in collaboration with Tom Murton, the superintendant of the prison in Arkansas where all those dead bodies of former prisoners were discovered and dug up by Murton.

Seagulls Honored

Some friends of mine, who have just returned from Africa, were relating stories about the strange statues erected by native tribes as shrines of worship.

They seemed to think this was exclusively a primitive custom, but men have always erected monuments to odd objects of wonder and devotion.

★ ★ ★

When the pioneer Mormons in Salt Lake City were ready to harvest their first grain crop, crickets and grasshoppers threatened to destroy the fields. But, just then seagulls by the thousands came up from the lake and devoured the insects, thus saving the harvest. The gull is a "sacred" bird in Utah today, and a monument to its honor stands in Salt Lake City.

An effigy of the codfish hangs in the Massachusetts Statehouse, and another was hung in one assembly fall or another for more than 200 years. The codfish saved the early settlers from starving.

There is a monument in the public square of Enterprise, Ala., from which a huge boll weevil, rampant, looks down upon the town. It seems that the weevil destroyed the cotton one year, and forced the farmers to deversify their crops, which turned out to be a blessing.

★ ★ ★

At Little Compton, R.I., a monument to a hen commemorates the orgin of the Rhode Island Red breed of chicken. And elsewhere in that state, at Newport, there stands a monument to Michelle Felice Corne, the first man who dared to eat a tomato.

We must not forget, of course, Robert Quillen, the humorist of Fountain Inn, S.C., who put up a marble shaft five feet high in his garden, with the inscription: "To Eve, the First Woman."

When Lord Byron's Newfoundland dog died, the poet buried him in the ruins of the ancient church at Newstead Abbey, with his grave marked by a tall and finely carved pedestal bearing the inscription: "Near this spot are deposited the remains of one who possessed beauty without vanity, strength without insolence, courage without ferocity, and all the virtues of man without his vices."

Professor Warns of 'American Empire'

'New Left' Urges More Radical NDP for Canada

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Any lingering hope that the New Democratic Party with its surprise election success in Manitoba now might be going "straight" or "square," as the socialists term it, was despelled today.

NDP Premier Ed Schreyer's new Manitoba government was triumphantly labelled "socialist" by so good an authority as Canadian Labor, the official house organ of the Canadian Labor Congress.

★ ★ ★

But more striking than that, the leaders of the "new left" of the NDP called a press conference to sound a national call for "radicalization" of their party.

Spokesmen for the self-proclaimed "leftist" NDP was Prof. Melville Watkins, of Toronto University's economics faculty and author of the Watkins Report on foreign ownership of industry and business in Canada.

Flanked by five aides, Prof. Watkins came to his press conference armed with news releases, one of which headed "For an Independent Canada," carried such statements as these:

"The NDP must be seen as the parliamentary wing of a movement dedicated to fundamental social change.

"It must be radicalized from within and it must be radicalized from without."

★ ★ ★

Then this:

"The major threat to Canadian survival today is American control of the economy.

"Canada has been reduced to a satellite of the American empire.

"It is an empire characterized by militarism abroad and racism at home. It is an empire held together through world-wide military alliances and by giant monopoly corporations."

Prof. Watkins went on to say that the NDP must smash it.

★ ★ ★

He wasn't bothered, it seemed, by the very obvious conclusion that to smash it, the defensive alliances of the west would have to broken up, leaving the free world vulnerable to attack and subjugation like Czechoslovakia.

Prof. Watkins was asked why American corporations were such a "horror," while American labor unions were "more than welcome" by the NDP which depends so much on their organizational and financial support.

He couldn't explain it. He didn't even attempt to rationalize it. He just turned the problem over to one of his aides, Giles Endicott, a member of the Steel Workers an American-dominated international union) who simply said control in the United States of Canadian labor was "acceptable, even beneficial."

Prof. Watkins was asked where did he think leftists could take the NDP, when, in Manitoba the party had narrowly won by "avoiding" the socialist label," and had been so badly clobbered in British Columbia where Social Credit had conducted a crusade against socialism.

★ ★ ★

The main thing was, Prof. Watkins grinned, that the NDP had won in Manitoba, and having won, now could begin acting like socialists.

As for what had happened in B.C. he had what he called "a pretty good answer."

It was this — five out of the six NDP candidates who had signed the leftist "manifesto," as he called it, "won their seats."

So, he deduced, "obviously, socialism didn't frighten the electors on their constituencies."

The five successful "leftist" NDP candidates were listed as Dave Barrett, Eileen Dailly, Gordon Dowding, Jim Lorimer and Alex MacDonald.

Prof. Watkins and his activists are going to the NDP Winnipeg convention this fall to begin "radicalizing" the party.

★ ★ ★

Some of the NDP veterans around here — the men who have had to win elections — don't mind saying they rather expect Prof. Watkins and his socialist radicals to get little if any support from Premier Shreyer.

Tories' Parley Spelled

OTTAWA (Special) — Two incredible news conferences were held here Thursday.

One was Toronto university economics professor Melville Watkins'. It was called to proclaim the rise of the New Left in the New Democratic Party and a drive to "radicalize" the socialists.

The other was Conservative leader Robert Stanfield's. It was called to fill in some of the details of the "thinkers' conference" the party had scheduled at Niagara Falls for the Thanksgiving weekend.

EIGHT POINTS

The conference will deal with what Stanfield termed "eight main streams" — Quality of Life, Science and Research, Poverty, The Changing Environment, Resource Policy, Regional Development, The Economy in the '70s and Canada and the World Community.

The parley has been organized by Professor Tom Symons of Trent University, the party's resident egghead.

MAIN STREAMS

In the area of "main streams" in Canadian contemporary life, Stanfield was asked, "Where does the language question and the national unity problem fit in your eight-point program?"

It didn't, he replied.

"Everybody knows our policy on that," he explained. He added that he had outlined it "often," as late as this May.

SOLID FACT

Explained often or infrequently, the fact remains that "everybody" clearly does not know the Conservative position on the language and unity issues.

It remains as confused as it was when it came out of the last Conservative "thinkers' conference" under the heading of Deux Nations at Montmorency Falls two years ago.

No Cut-Off Needed on UVic Enrolment?

By BILL STAVDAL

Only a handful of would-be students may be turned away from the University of Victoria this month, and possibly UVic will have room for all of them said admission Dean Ronald Jeffels Thursday.

Even freshman applicants in UVic's lowest priority category have been informed they are admissible, said Dean Jeffels.

"It looks like enrolment will be close to the 5,200 students we were told to admit," the dean said.

This summer the university set a limit of 5,200 undergraduates for the 1969-70 year. It blamed an allegedly inadequate government operating grant for the decision.

The enrolment ceiling included a limit of 2,000 first-year students.

Top priority on a six-step list was given to B.C. residents with a high school graduating average of 67 per cent or better.

Dean Jeffels said Thursday that "just over 2,200" students had applied for enrolment in first-year studies, He added that the normal pattern is for a number to go elsewhere or fail to show up for registration.

One group still in the dark is senior matriculation (Grade 13) students who wrote their exams late in August. Dean Jeffels said these students haven't received their results yet.

The outcome will decide whether some of them apply for first or second-year studies, he said.

Some of the pressure on first-year enrolment has been eased by Malaspina regional college in Nanaimo. Next week it will open doors for about 500 students, many of them taking first-year university subjects.

Demand for seating at Malaspina College has exceeded estimates. Last week 623 would-be students had applied for admission.

About 60 per cent of UVic's enrolment comes from the Greater Victoria area, with much of the rest drawn from up-Island points in the past.

Dean Jeffels reported Thursday that two-year colleges in other parts of B.C. have begun exerting a new pressure on UVic.

"The influx into second year is greater than it's ever been," he said.

Third-year applications also are up because of regional college grads, he added.

Who's Liable for What?

Up-in-Air House Victoria Puzzle

By PAT MURPHY

A rambling, furniture-filled, Terrace Avenue house left to the city by a millionaire, who died here at the age of 84, was discussed Thursday at a city finance committee meeting.

Allan Douglas Ford died in 1967 and his last will apportioned an estate of $1,152,792. It left $50,000 to a son, John, living in Australia, the remainder to charity and a codicil bequeathed his house, its contents and 2.3 acres of valuable land to the city.

In January of this year son John disputed his father's will.

AFTER WEEK

After a week of evidence Mr. Justice R. A. B. Wootton upheld the will whereupon lawyers for the son filed an appeal.

The appeal will probably be heard in November in Vancouver, according to Donald Cameron, who was the Victoria arm of the battery of lawyers acting for the son.

THE COSTS

The questions which aldermen discussed Thursday, was:

Who will pay for the maintenance costs (about $6,000 a year) when the estate dispute is finally settled? Is there any chance that the city might be liable for the $12,000 already paid.

The money, up to this point, has been paid by Royal Trust Co. executors for t heestate of the senior Ford, aldermen were told.

Mayor Hugh Stephen pointed out that the legal hassle could go on for another two years. Meanwhile, he asked, where did the city, as a beneficiary, stand with regard to maintenance costs?

PROTECTION THERE

City Solicitor T. P. O'Grady said there was a housekeeper in the residence who was being paid $300 a month. She was, in effect, protecting the effects in the house and the structure itself.

There had been a proposal made, the lawyer continued, that the contents of the house be sold and that it be closed pending the termination of the appeal and any court action which might follow.

VALUABLE PLACE

If the will was upheld, the mayor said, the city would come into a valuable property estimated to be worth between $300,000 and $400,000.

The whole matter was tabled pending a decision on the appeal hearing to be held in November.

Bastion Theatre To Ask City To Fill Aid Gap

Victoria council will be asked to pick up a $1,355 shortage which is facing Bastion Theatre this year.

Finance committee was informed Thursday that the theatrical company, on the recommendation of the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee, was to get $11,000 from municipalities this year.

However, one community opted out and another cut its grant by $500. Bastion was asking the city to make up the loss.

For several years the city made an annual grant to Bastion up to $10,000 and then the company came under the wing of the intermunicipal committee and the grant was shared.

This year the city's share would be $4,300 plus the $1,355.

Ald. Robert Baird said the Bastion players performed for more than 14,000 in their summer shows, mostly for children, in Bastion and Centennial Squares. They had, furthermore, big plans for next year and it would be to the city's advantage to give all the help it could, he said.

Bus Ticket Increased To Airport

A round-trip bus ticket to the airport now costs $3.

G. C. Parrott, executive vice-president of Vancouver Island Coach Lines, said the company received word from the B.C. Public Utilities Commission Thursday morning that the $1 price hike had been approved.

One-way fares remain unchanged at $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children.

Mr. Parrott said the price change was not an actual increase in fare, but a removal of the special round-trip fare of $2. And, he said, "Nowhere else in North America has there been such a special rate."

Big Film Studio Changes Name

NEW YORK (Reuters)—Twentieth Century Fox Film Corp., one of the last of the Hollywood film giants, plans to change its name to 21st Century Corp. The announcement came after the company reported a loss in the first half of the year of more than $2,000,000. The firm omitted the normal dividend.

Release of 15 Political Prisoners Demanded

U.S. Ambassador Abducted in Rio

From AP-Reuters

RIO DE JANEIRO — Communist raiders kidnapped U.S. Ambassador Charles Burke Elbrick Thursday and demanded that Brazil release 15 political prisoners as the price for his life.

Four gunmen, some of them bearded, ambushed Elbrick's limousine on a Rio street and drove off with him in a station wagon. A report said he was chloroformed.

A political manifesto left behind by the abductors said the 61-year-old Elbrick was seized because he was "the symbol of exploitation."

* * *

The document said Elbrick's life "is in the hands of the dictatorship" — meaning the military government of Brazil.

The kidnappers said Elbrick will be executed if the government does not accept their demands within 48 hours — by Saturday afternoon.

The demanded that the 15 political prisoners be flown to Algeria, Chile or Mexico where they would seek political asylum.

The kidnappers forced Elbrick from his limousine as he rode back from lunch at his residence to the downtown embassy offices.

Police sources said four men armed with guns cut off the Cadillac limousine with a small Volkswagen.

Elbrick

They took Elbrick to a Volkswagen station wagon and fled leaving behind the embassy driver, a homemade bomb that did not go off, and the ransom note.

The abduction took place a few blocks from the ambassador's residence and a large military police barracks that is heavily guarded.

The manifesto said the two signing organizations — the MR-8 and the National Liberation Action — would no longer tolerate alleged tortures, beatings and killings of their members at the hands of authorities.

* * *

"Now it's an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," the manifesto said.

In San Clemente, Calif., the Western White House said President Nixon is concerned over the kidnapping and is following developments closely.

The state department in Washington said the Brazilian government had promised every effort to obtain Elbrick's release.

LONDON (UPI) — Remember that first drink? If you do, there's a possibility you may be an alcoholic, according to the British National Council of Alcoholism.

A report Thursday by the council said one of the best ways to spot an alcoholic is by whether he remembers his first drink.

Persons not dependent on alcohol rarely remember the first drink, "even if it was stolen from their father when they were 12," the report added.

Strachan for Chief? 'You Can't Go Back'

● Leftists seek more radical federal NDP. Page 39

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cowichan-Malahat MLA Robert Strachan Thursday ruled out out any chance of returning to the New Democratic Party provincial leadership he held for 13 years prior to his resignation in April.

Mr. Strachan, 55, said in an interview he would also refuse to accept leadership of the party in the Legislature in the wake of leader Tom Berger's defeat in the Aug. 27 provincial election.

* * *

His comments came during an NDP caucus meeting here attended by 10 of the party's 11 MLAs. The session, first since the election, was called to discuss the political future of Mr. Berger, Mr. Strachan's successor.

"You can't go back, I've already been leader of the party," said Mr. Strachan. "I'm not in the running for the House leadership—if I allowed my name to stand I would be considered a possible future leader of the party and I am not."

* * *

Mr. Berger, a 36-year-old lawyer who was defeated by a Social Crediter in the Vancouver-Burrard riding on election day, said that he has turned down offers by "some MLAs" to resign, which would enable him to try for a Legislature seat in a byelection.

"I have told them I don't intend to act on their offer," said Mr. Berger. "They have been elected to do a job and I think they should do it."

No decision on the fate of the NDP leadership was announced. Mr. Berger said he would decide whether to stay on or resign "probably later this month." He did not identify the MLAs who volunteered to resign.

With Mr. Strachan out of the running, three candidates remain for the NDP House leadership. Considered the most likely successor to Mr. Berger is Coquitlam MLA Dave Barrett, a 38-year-old social worker.

Mr. Barrett, runner-up to Mr. Berger at the NDP's April leadership convention, has said he's waiting to see what Mr. Berger will do before making any announcement of his own plans.

Other names figuring prominently in NDP strategy sessions are Alex Macdonald, 50-year-old NDP deputy leader, and Bob Williams, 36, who finished a distant third at the leadership convention.

Cong Call Ceasefire To Mourn Ho

● Hanoi rivals disagree only on means to end war. Page 5

From AP, UPI

SAIGON — The Viet Cong announced today that a three-day ceasefire in mourning for North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh will start at 1 a.m. Saigon time, next Monday. Initial indications were that United States and South Vietnamese forces would honor it.

An announcement broadcast by the Viet Cong's clandestine radio offered safe conduct to any South Vietnamese and American troops who wanted to enter Communist-held areas in the South to participate in funeral observances. The radio said the Viet Cong would do everything possible to protect any such mourners.

END PRESUMED

The ceasefire presumably would end at 1 a.m. Thursday. Saigon time.

Hanoi has given no official date for the funeral, but Cuban and North Korea radio broadcasts said Ho will be buried Wednesday.

Soviet and Communist Chinese leaders will probably meet face to face for the first time in 4½ years at the state rites.

NEW ATTACKS

Meanwhile, Communist troops staged a new wave of attacks throughout South Vietnam late Thursday and early today by shelling at least 66 targets with rockets and mortars and hurling ground assaults against U.S. bases north of Saigon.

Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai arrived in Hanoi Thursday with two other Chinese officials to attend the funeral, and diplomatic sources in Moscow said Premier Alexei Kosygin will fly to Hanoi today.

The arrival of high-ranking delegations from China and the Soviet Union will present Hanoi with a tricky protocol problem in managing the emissaries of

Tanks Rushed To Libyan City

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Libyan troops and tanks occupied Libya's second largest city Thursday, Libyan air force planes patrolled over oil installations and one report said a new revolutionary leader has emerged in the murky post-coup political situation.

The North African country's borders remained sealed. Since a military junta deposed King Idris I last Monday, Tripoli radio has been the main source of information, augmented by other Arab news agencies.

Tripoli radio announced troops and tanks entered Bengasi, 700 miles from the capital, "without meeting any resistance." It gave no explanation, but Bengasi is the capital of Cyrenaica province, where desert tribes are known to be frantically loyal to the deposed king.

PLANES GROUNDED

Diplomatic sources in Tunis also reported British infantry training exercises in the Cyrenaican Desert have been cancelled. All planes at United States and British air bases in Libya have been grounded since the coup.

The Libyan news agency reported air force planes were flying constant patrols over the country's oil installations after anti-British demonstrations broke out Wednesday night.

Egypt's Middle East news agency said the demonstrations followed reports that King Idris had asked for British military help to try to regain his throne.

Israeli Raid Kills Five In Lebanon

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli troops crossed into southern Lebanon today and raided a small village, the army said.

Four Israeli soldiers were wounded and at least five Lebanese were killed in the 1½-hour raid, which began at midnight Thursday night, a spokesman said.

The army said 12 buildings in the village of Halda, two miles inside Lebanon, were destroyed.

The invading force had instructions not to harm civilians, but apparently it encountered some opposition.

Federation Chiefs Call Emergency Session

Oil Strike Move Splits Labor

VANCOUVER (CP)—A simmering dispute within the British Columbia labor movement over conduct of the 15-week oil workers strike boiled over here Thursday.

The B.C. Federation of Labor called its 20-member executive council into emergency session Thursday night to discuss the action of the Oil, Atomic and Chemical Workers Union in defying the federation by appearing before the B.C. Mediation Commission in a bid to end the strike against six major oil companies in the Lower Mainland.

And the oil union, a federation affiliate, sent a telegram to the parent Canadian Labor Congress demanding that the federation be instructed to stop interfering in the union's autonomous affairs.

The federation has ordered its member oganization to refrain from appearing before the commission as a protest against B.C. Labor legislation.

Earlier Thursday, the independent Teamsters Union announced it was delaying earlier announced plans to ban what it called the "hot" products of the six companies—Imperial, Shell, Standard, Home, Texaco and Gulf — pending the outcome of the commission hearings.

Ray Haynes, federation secretary-treasurer said the teamsters' action is "calculated to bolster the sagging mediation commission" and "aid the Social Credit government."

The federation supported the New Democratic Party during the recent B.C. general election.

Mr. Haynes said that all through the strike Teamster drivers had been using hot fuel in their trucks and had been delivering hot gasoline through an arrangement with non-union drivers.

* * *

Last week the Teamsters announced its members would not operate any equipment using hot fuel from the struck companies.

Thursday, Teamster President Ed Lawson said the edict was being withdrawn for the time being "in view of the publicly-announced intention of the oilworkers union to appear and present its case to the mediation commission."

He said the action had been requested by the oilworkers.

* * *

The commission hearing was adjourned Thursday to Monday after R. T. Philp, representing the oilwdrkers, said the union was not ready to proceed.

A spokesman for the companies said the firms would agree to the adjournment provided the union guaranteed to cease illegal picketing and stop incidents such as rock-

Bernadette Says Barricades Stay

BELFAST (AP) — Bernadette Devlin returned to Londonderry's Bogside Thursday after her American tour and announced: "The barricades stay up until the (Northern Ireland) government comes down."

Bernadette was smuggled in from the Irish Republic, avoiding the police and military whom, she says, may want to arrest her.

In a bar inside the barricaded Bogside the 22-year-old Roman Catholic civil rights activist told reporters that money she raised in the United States will be available for the relief of families made homeless in last month's Catholic-Protestant riots as soon as it can be transferred from American banks.

Cowichan Event

Fair Ready For Opening

By KLAUS MUENTER

DUNCAN — Everything is ready for the 1969 Cowichan Fall Fair.

It will be the 102nd such event and has grown from a modest pioneer farmers' event at St. Peter's Anglican Church, Quamichan, more than a century ago to an exhibition which commands province-wide attention among livestock men and visitors.

Between the time the gates open at 8 a.m. today and closing time Saturday night, more than 10,000 are expected to have visited the fair which has been described as Vancouver Island's show window.

For many years the Cowichan fair has been a complete community involvement with farmers, gardeners, housewives, artists, craftsmen, merchants, service clubs, fraternal organizations and various youth groups participating.

This year's event may spell the end of an era, paving the way to a new one in 1970 or the following year.

Because the fall fair is a combined effort of many varied groups, the curling rink adjacent to the fair grounds has housed some of the greatest drawing cards including all indoor exhibits.

Recently the curling rink was sold by a private recreational enterprise to a Duncan Business firm and this year may be the last one that it can be used for the fair. While this year's fair was still in the planning stage Tom Groves, president of the Cowichan Exhibition Board and his executive began to consider various solutions to guarantee the continuation of the fall fair without the use of the curling rink.

FUTURE PLANS

Mr. Groves said Thursday, "Now we have arrived at a crossroad and we must make plans for future fairs. We realize indoor exhibits play a significant role in our fair and somehow we must find a solution to this imminent problem."

He hinted that perhaps a canvas roof can accommodate indoor exhibits next year. Mr Groves and his executive hope that the problem can be solved permanently by erecting a building on the fair grounds.

He said: We need some sort of a roof for the indoor exhibits and I would suggest a simple building either with a dirt floor or with a more elaborate floor with a heating system for many different uses. However, we must keep our feet on the ground."

Mr. Groves suggested structure would be well below the $100,000 mark and could become a community-agricultural hall along the line of the Centennial building at Chilliwack.

STAGE FACILITIES

With simple stage facilities, the hall could serve an even greater need in the greater Duncan area.

Mr. Groves said: We have a very strong organization, we have the land and now we need the public's sympathy. The Cowichan fall fair is the only major celebration left in this area and it surely deserves all the support from the district. We have the biggest cattle horse show on Vancouver Island and it would be safe to say the entire community is involved in some way."

Mr. Groves admitted that without indoor exhibits, the fall fair could eventually sink into oblivion. He noted the fair was of considerable benefit to many people at Duncan and surrounding areas and he expressed confidence that local governments would rally around not only with practical suggestions as to how to overcome the lack of a suitable hall but with tangible assistance.

'DUNCAN FORTUNATE'

Mr. Groves emphasized that a society, any society, is only as good as its farming community which always remained the backbone of any country. Duncan in the past had been fortunate enough to have had a healthy combination of agriculture, commerce and industry, he said.

The fair will be officially opened 2:20 p.m. Saturday by Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson.

Exhibition board secretary Mrs. Winnie Rolfe said the entries in the light horse section had increased from 147 last year to 225 this year. There would be a very strong 4-H cattle entry.

FAIR HIGHLIGHTS

Some highlights during the two-day fair will include: horse show, steer riding, highland events, sheepdog trials, loggers' sports, pet show, dog races, 4-H square dancing competition and a variety of entertainment.

Patience Big Factor

Fair entrants need lot of patience as 2½-year-old Shorthorn champion bull Tabes Toreador demonstrates above, as he goes through shower bath provided by his mistress Mrs. George Tatton of Sooke. Their efforts are watched by exhibition board president Tom Groves. Tabes Toreador is owned by G. E. and J. L. Tatton of Tabes Farm, Sooke. Housing Scheme

Prompt Action Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. H. R. McDiarmid, Social Credit MLA for Alberni, said Thursday he will ask Attorney-General Leslie Peterson for quick action on a promised investigation of the failure of B.C.'s first co-operative housing scheme.

Dr. McDiarmid said in an interview that the attorney-general promised during the recent election campaign he would investigate the Barclay Co-Operative Housing Association in Port Alberni.

★ ★ ★

"I am going to Victoria to see Mr. Peterson on Friday to urge him to follow up his promise as quickly as he can," said Dr. McDiarmid. "It's important that action be taken as soon as possible."

The B.C. Central Credit Union started foreclosure proceedings against the co-operative in June.

C. J. Hook, general manager of CCU said at that time he was acting "with extreme reluctance" to protect the CCU interests in the Barclay Co-Op's $400,000 24-unit, townhouse development.

He said CCU has a claim of more than $80,000 against the co operative and he understood there were other claims totalling at least $100,000.

★ ★ ★

Barclay co-op members are living in 14 of the units at Port Alberni.

Ten other members, who made down payments of from $750 to $900 do not know when they will be able to move in as construction halted in April when CCU stopped interim financing payments.

Mr. Hook said the people involved in the project were "extremely sincere and idealistic. They just didn't have the know-how to put it together. They just didn't have competence."

McDiarmid

Dr. McDiarmid said the people involved in the project want the investigation.

★ ★ ★

"They want to know whether ineptness and mismanagement were in fact the causes of the co-operative's failure, or whether there is something else involved."

He did not enlarge on the statement.

A statement released by occupants of the housing project Wednesday said they were prepared to pay rent pending the outcome of any investigation into the failure of the co-operative.

The Barclay Co-Operative Housing Association is one of five autonomous groups within the Western Co-Operative Housing Society, a non-profit organization formed two years ago to plan, promote and supervise the construction of co-operative housing throughout B.C.

The four other groups are Vancouver, Victoria, Nanaimo and Abbotsford.

★ ★ ★

The Barclay Co-Op began construction in November on what was planned as an 80-unit townhouse development for 360 persons. The units were to have cost from $15,000 to $18,000.

The co-op members paid five per cent down, Central Mortgage and Housing advanced 95 per cent mortgages, and the B.C. Central Credit Union agreed to provide up to $100,000 in interim financing.

Fish Study

Norwegian Scientist Visits B.C.

By ARNOLD OLSON

NANAIMO — Although there are basic and historical differences between fisheries departments of other countries and Canada, the uniting concern must soon be preservation of the general ecology throughout the world.

Those were sentiments expressed Thursday by Dr. Dag Moller who is working in Canada for two years. He is connected with the Norwegian Marine Research Institute and has been working in co-operation with Canadian Fisheries on the Eastern coast of Canada. He has been in Nanaimo for about a week and is due to leave at the weekend.

He said he brought his family to British Columbia to enjoy a bit of a holiday, mixed with business.

His specialization is fish population identification and he was asked to determine if some salmon population of specific rivers had been intermarrying" with those of other rivers.

EYE COLOR

"The main thing to do at the beginning, is to start with genetic characteristics. This is a very elementary item, but let us say that we determine that eye color is a genetic characteristic, where fish in one river have blue eyes and in another river the eyes are brown.

"If we have 75 per cent blue in one river and the same amount are brown in the other river, when the females have equal chances of breeding with males from either river, we can assume that the fishes from these rivers do not 'intermarry', Dr. Moller said.

"Although I'm here on a two-year contract, I'm also learning. I'm learning about a new culture and I'm also learning from my fellow scientists that I meet here.

INLAND FISHING

"This fisheries research centre you have here is recognized as important throughout the world. It is larger than the one in Norway.

He said that the two countries had different approaches toward fisheries. In Canada, he said, both sea and fresh water fisheries were under the same governmental department control while they were separated in Norway.

"The inland fishing is more a private or sport industry because historically the rivers belonged to the farmers through whose land the water flowed.

"Therefore the freshwater fishing — the salmon that are caught upstream are under control of the agriculture department. But when the fish are caught at sea, that is a different matter. Then they are under control of the fisheries department.

BETTER CARE

"The sea fishing there is traditional, especially the cod, where for centuries families have fished. As a general comparison, from what little I've seen on the east coast, the European fisherman takes better care of his fish than do the Canadian fisherman . . . but remember, I'm not claiming I've seen very much of the fishing — none on this coast and little back east," Dr. Moller said.

"In fishing regulations we are a little ahead of you people here. We have more fishermen going after fish in the same general areas and therefore there must be more control," he said.

He said there was increasing need for international co-operation to protect fisheries, "because after all, we don't know exactly where the fish move in the ocean."

LESS IMPORTANCE

He said that as world populations grew, the financial considerations must take less importance.

"For instance, in Norway, there is increasing need for electricity and the rivers are being dammed and the fish are being wiped out. We must begin to think of what we are taking away from our children and their children just to satisfy our immediate need for quick profit.

"We have the same problems as you have here. Right now one must decide if logging is more profitable than fishing and if so then it is all right to log off areas, burn slash and eventually wipe out salmon-bearing streams by pollution or physically destroying the streams altogether. But we must remember that the trees can grow back in but once the fish are gone, they are gone forever."

'Burning Affects Fishing'

NANAIMO — Provincial Fisheries biologist Charles Lyons said Thursday that slash burning did not confine itself to air pollution.

He was answering comments made by Resources Minister Ray Williston who said benefits must be weighed against minimal air pollution effects.

Mr. Lyons said: "It indirectly affects fish production, soil nutrition and water quality."

He said that sediment deposits in streams, following burning, had adverse affects upon fish spawning grounds.

"And in the case of our small feeder tributaries, it may even kill the fish in the stream by increased temperatures."

The burning, he said, allowed rains to create swifter flows of water which ripped earth from hills and "this soil has to go somewhere and it ends up in the river. And erosion certainly is one of the most serious problems of fish production we have. From a fish manager's view point, I can't agree with Mr. Williston."

Whaletown School Project

Lighting Scheme Approved

CAMPBELL RIVER — In the hustle and bustle of settling nearly 4,900 students and 225 teachers into 20 elementary, junior and senior secondary schools in Campbell River District, Miss Nancy Jenkins and her nine pupils at Whaletown elementary school on Cortes Island will not be forgotten.

The board of trustees this week approved installation of temporary lighting facilities at the one-room school as soon as possible.

A generator will be obtained, on lease if possible, and a suitable shed built on the school grounds to house it.

The school is presently being wired in anticipation of establishment of hydro-electric Logie noted overloading of some power on Cortes Island. However, no opening date has yet been set by B.C. Hydro. In the meantime, Whaletown school is illuminated by propane gas.

CLASS LOAD

Schools Superintendent James Logie nottd overloading of some classes at Pinecrest elementary school, Campbell River. Enrollment there on opening day was 236, up 27 from last year's figure.

Board chairman Bruce Saunders said he was in favor of hiring of additional teachers and-or teachers' aides to cope with the situation, rather than shifting of school boundaries so that the overflow could be absorbed at other schools.

The board will apply to the education department for the appointment of a school director when enrollment reaches the 5,000 mark. Such an official would have more diversified powers under the School Act, than the present supervisor of instruction. Secretary-treasurer Philip Sampson pointed out that any adjustment of costs would be of a minor nature.

LEASE RENEWAL

Mr. Sampson will negotiate with Campbell River District Credit Union for renewal of a lease of the school board offices in the credit union building. It was noted that there were not prospects at present of the school board building its own offices.

The secretary-treasurer will also negotiate a lease for two years with Ajax Terminals Ltd., with options for renewal or purchase of their property in Campbellton, for it to be set aside for future school board purposes such as maintenance shops. The board has also recommended to the education department that the property be purchased.

The board approved a recommendation from Mr. Sampson that rooms in schools that will be open in the evenings during the coming term be made available to groups and organizations at a charge of $1 an hour, with a minimum charge of $3 an evening.

POLICY REVIEW

Present board policy permits free use of classrooms to organizations solely concerned with youth and-or school students. It was suggested that a meeting be convened in the near future to review policy on use of schools and grounds.

The building committee reported that addition of an activity room at Pinecrest is proceeding on schedule, as well as construction of the gymnasium-cafeteria complex at the senior secondary school where final cleanup and take-over is expected by the end of November.

ROOF REPAIRS

Roof repairs on the vocational wing at the senior secondary school have been carried out by the contractors, Thorn and Co. Ltd., Vancouver, to the satisfaction of the board. However, the matter of more than $2,000 damage done to the school by a leaky roof had not been settled, it was stated.

Mr. Sampson said: "In other words, the contractor is repairing the roof but not accepting responsibility for the damage."

Instruction supervisor of instruction Brian Johnston reported that a teacher-aide training course held last month had proved very successful. More than 100-men and women had registertd for the 20-hour course which included audio-visual training. Results indicate that there are a large number of qualified teacher-aides now available.

The board commended Mr. Johnston for his good work in promoting the course.

The board approved a motion that $3,300 of existing non-shareable current funds be allocated to purchase of non-solo band instrument s for the senior secondary school.

The tender of Imperial Oil Ltd. has been accepted for supply of fuel. Close to 250,000 gallons are used annually in the school district.

Leave of absence was granted senior secondary school principal John Young to attend a French language council sponsored by the Canadian Ttachers' Association in Ottawa on Sept. 26 and Sept. 27.

Boys Raised To Adult Court

NANAIMO—Two judges of the family division of Nanaimo provincial court Wednesday raised five boys to adult court and said the safety of the community was their overriding concern.

The boys had all escaped from Brannan Lake school.

Judge Eric Winch raised three 15-year-olds to adult court on the application of Crown Counsel Alan Filmer, who said he had the consent of the attorney-general's department.

"The community can't stand the number of runaways," Judge Winch said. The two separate hearings involved two housebreakings, in which a .303 rifle was stolen, and a car theft.

One of the three later was dealt with by Judge Stan Wardill in open court. He was given one day in jail for both breakins, then was put on probation for two years in custody of his mother.

Judge Wardill later presided in the family division and raised to adult court a 15-year-old boy and a companion of 16.

Maple Bay Water Supply Discussed by Engineer

MAPLE BAY — John Sansom, engineer for North Cowichan, described the quality and quantity of the Maple Bay water supply to more than 50 ratepayers and five aldermen Thursday evening.

For more than two years, residents of Maple Bay have been complaining to North Cowichan council that their water tastes bad, has an odor and is dirty. When Kurt Horn, president of Maply Bay Ratepayers' Association asked that anyone who did not have a problem with the quality and quantity of water in the area, to stand up, three stood.

Mr. Sansom described the quality of the water to the ratepayers, stating that after an investigation into the rusty water they found that the two wells on York Street were of a corrosive nature and that the old system was encrusted with rust and debris.

★ ★ ★

"To replace the system would cost between $60,000 to $80,000 so we had to take a more sensible approach," he said.

"The recommendation from the investigation and report was a treatment plant and injecting sodium carbonate into it. After two months, last week we took stock and the results were that we are still getting red water. The water is much softer but the treatment hasn't gone far enough. From the wells, we find from one we are getting almost neutral water and the other is not working."

Mr. Sansom explained that they were starting to inject a new chemical into the treatment plant.

"After a few months if we find that fails, the next step is to try and clean out the mains," he stated. "It will be a very difficult and dirty process and may take a month to do. If that fails, the ultimate answer is to replace the mains and that will have to be done in phases over the years."

★ ★ ★

He said that Maple Bay residents were using much more water than calculated per household. "Under normal circumstances, 500 gallons of water per household per day could be used. In the hot season the average use was 900 gallons per household per day," he said.

"We have found more water situated on the Elliott property, south of Duncan on the Cowichan River. I propose we develop it immediately so there will be an adequate supply next summer."

A letter from Maple Bay Fire Chief Bus Lesquesne, was read at the meeting stating that fire protection in the district was totally inadequate. He discussed the fire hall and inadequate equipment and said it was difficult to keep up the moral of the fire department.

McDiarmid Faces Charge

PORT ALBERNI — Newly elected Alberni MLA Dr. Howard McDiarmid has been charged in Tofino with drinking in a public place.

An RCMP officer at Tofino would only say that Dr. McDiarmid would appear in court sometime in September.

Dr. McDiarmid said the charges were pending following his attendance at a beach party prior to leaving on a month's holiday in July.

He said at the time he welcomed the chance to fight existing B.C. liquor laws.

Dr. McDiarmid was in Vancouver Thursday and not available for comment.

Street Paving Launched In Courtenay

COURTENAY—Paving in Courtenay was underway, Courtenay aldermen were told this week.

Administrator Bill Moore said that work was progressing on sections at 18th and England streets and two portions on Sixth and Cliffe Avenue, to Third Street, were to be completed in this year's program.

★ ★ ★

Aldermen were told that two boys had admitted causing $300 worth of damage to restrooms at Woodcote Park.

Mr. Moore said that pipelaying in the Willemar Road area was due to start this week. The project, which would provide ditch drainage, had been temporarily delayed until the pipe had arrived.

★ ★ ★

Mr. Moore said the changeover from the old city dump to a new dump at Pidgeon Lake appeared to have worked out smoothly. The dump, formed under an agreement with Cumberland, would be open seven days a week.

Council was told that building permits were down slightly in July, the first time that had happened in many months. A total of $65,500 in permits were issued. The amount included two homes.

Strike Incident

Worker Not Guilty On Assault Charge

NANAIMO — David McCree Patterson, 38, was found not guilty Thursday of assaulting a British Columbia Telephone Co. supervisor during an Aug. 4 battle involving five supervisors and a half dozen company employees.

Mr. Patterson pleaded not guilty to the charge, laid Aug. 26, following a police investigation into an altercation that sent supervisor James Ross, 57, of Burnaby, to hospital with facial cuts and broken ribs.

Provincial Court Judge W. G. Philpott said he was unable to be certain Mr. Patterson was guilty "due to a lack of evidence."

Testifying in his own defence, Mr. Patterson denied that he was involved in the incident. The Federation of Telephone Workers was on strike against the company at the time of the incident.

Parksville Traffic Control Law Adopted

PARKSVILLE — Parksville's first traffic control bylaw was given final reading, and adopted, at a regular meeting of the village council this week.

The 13-page bylaw contains a wide variety of regulations covering many phases of traffic safety measures and will give council the right to establish limited parking zones if considered necessary.

★ ★ ★

The bylaw also gives the RCMP power to enforce municipal regulations.

A reply has been received to a request for a 30 m.p.h. speed limit to be set throughout the village which was forwarded by council to the highways department.

The reply said that the request had been discussed with the RCMP who felt that Parksville was not yet ready for a 30 m.p.h. limit throughout the area and it was felt the proposal was premature.

★ ★ ★

After a discussion, it was decided to try to have the lower speed limit set for the summer. A section of road given as an example, was the two-mile length at Qualicum Beach.

Building inspector W. G. Wheeler, in his report for July and August, said that the value of building permits had reached $295,000 for the two months. The value included all types of construction, although projects consisted mostly of residential building.

A public hearing will be held Sept. 15 in connection with a bylaw to rezone a lot near McCarter Street from residential to commercial so that a trailer court can be established.

LONDON (UPI) — Remember that first drink? If you do, there's a possibility you may be an alcoholic, according to the British National Council of Alcoholism.

A report Thursday by the council said one of the best ways to spot an alcoholic is by whether he remembers his first drink.

Persons not dependent on alcohol rarely remember the first drink, "even if it was stolen from their father when they were 12," the report added.

Strachan for Chief? 'You Can't Go Back'

● Leftists seek more radical federal NDP. Page 39

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cowichan - Malahat MLA Robert Strachan Thursday ruled out out any chance of returning to the New Democratic Party provincial leadership he held for 13 years prior to his resignation in April.

Mr. Strachan, 55, said in an interview he would also refuse to accept leadership of the party in the Legislature in the wake of leader Tom Berger's defeat in the Aug. 27 provincial election.

★ ★ ★

His comments came during an NDP caucus meeting here attended by 10 of the party's 11 MLAs. The session, first since the election, was called to discuss the political future of Mr. Berger, Mr. Strachan's successor.

"You can't go back, I've already been leader of the party," said Mr. Strachan. "I'm not in the running for the House leadership—if I allowed my name to stand I would be considered a possible future leader of the party and I am not."

★ ★ ★

Mr. Berger, a 36-year-old lawyer who was defeated by a Social Crediter in the Vancouver-Burrard riding on election day, said that he has turned down offers by "some MLAs" to resign, which would enable him to try for a Legislature seat in a byelection.

"I have told them I don't intend to act on their offer," said Mr. Berger. "They have been elected to do a job and I think they should do it."

No decision on the fate of the NDP leadership was announced. Mr. Berger said he would decide whether to stay on or resign "probably later this month." He did not identify the MLAs who volunteered to resign.

With Mr. Strachan out of the running, three candidates remain for the NDP House leadership. Considered the most likely successor to Mr. Berger is Coquitlam MLA Dave Barrett, a 38-year-old social worker.

Mr. Barrett, runner-up to Mr. Berger at the NDP's April leadership convention, has said he's waiting to see what Mr. Berger will do before making any announcement of his own plans.

Other names figuring prominently in NDP strategy sessions are Alex Macdonald, 50-year-old NDP deputy leader, and Bob Williams, 36, who finished a distant third at the leadership convention.

RIO DE JANEIRO — Communist raiders kidnapped U.S. Ambassador Charles Burke Elbrick Thursday and demanded that Brazil release 15 political prisoners as the price for his life.

Four gunmen, some of them bearded, ambushed Elbrick's limousine on a Rio street and drove off with him in a station wagon. A report said he was chloroformed.

A political manifesto left behind by the abductors said the 61-year-old Elbrick was seized because he was "the symbol of exploitation."

★ ★ ★

The document said Elbrick's life "is in the hands of the dictatorship" — meaning the military government of Brazil.

The kidnappers said Elbrick will be executed if the government does not accept their demands within 48 hours — by Saturday afternoon.

The demanded that the 15 political prisoners be flown to Algeria, Chile or Mexico where they would seek political asylum.

★ ★ ★

The kidnappers forced Elbrick from his limousine as he rode back from lunch at his residence to the downtown embassy offices.

Police sources said four men armed with guns cut off the Cadillac limousine with a small Volkswagen.

They took Elbrick to a Volkswagen station wagon and fled leaving behind the embassy driver, a homemade bomb that did not go off, and the ransom note.

★ ★ ★

The abduction took place a few blocks from the ambassador's residence and a large military police barracks that is heavily guarded.

The manifesto said the two signing organizations — the MR-8 and the National Liberation Action — would no longer tolerate alleged tortures, beatings and killings of their members at the hands of authorities.

★ ★ ★

"Now it's an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," the manifesto said.

In San Clemente, Calif., the Western White House said President Nixon is concerned over the kidnapping and is following developments closely.

Cong Call Ceasefire To Mourn Ho

● Hanoi rivals disagree only on means to end war. Page 5

From AP, UPI

SAIGON — The Viet Cong announced today that a three-day ceasefire in mourning for North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh will start at 1 a.m. Saigon time, next Monday. Initial indications were that United States and South Vietnamese forces would honor it.

An announcement broadcast by the Viet Cong's clandestine radio offered safe conduct to any South Vietnamese and American troops who wanted to enter Communist-held areas in the South to participate in funeral observances. The radio said the Viet Cong would do everything possible to protect any such mourners.

END PRESUMED

The ceasefire presumably would end at 1 a.m. Thursday, Saigon time.

Hanoi has given no official date for the funeral, but Cuban and North Korea radio broadcasts said Ho will be buried Wednesday.

Soviet and Communist Chinese leaders will probably meet face to face for the first time in 4½ years at the state rites.

NEW ATTACKS

Meanwhile, Communist troops staged a new wave of attacks throughout South Vietnam late Thursday and early today by shelling at least 66 targets with rockets and mortars and hurling ground assaults against U.S. bases north of Saigon.

Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai arrived in Hanoi Thursday with two other Chinese officials to attend the funeral, and diplomatic sources in Moscow said Premier Alexei Kosygin will fly to Hanoi today.

The arrival of high-ranking delegations from China and the Soviet Union will present Hanoi with a tricky protocol problem in managing the emissaries of

Tanks Rushed To Libyan City

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Libyan troops and tanks occupied Libya's second largest city Thursday, Libyan air force planes patrolled over oil installations and one report said a new revolutionary leader has emerged in the murky post-coup political situation.

The North African country's borders remained sealed. Since a military junta deposed King Idris I last Monday, Tripoli radio has been the main source of information, augmented by other Arab news agencies.

Tripoli radio announced troops and tanks entered Bengasi, 700 miles from the capital, "without meeting any resistance." It gave no explanation, but Bengasi is the capital of Cyrenaica province, where desert tribes are known to be fanatically loyal to the deposed king.

PLANES GROUNDED

Diplomatic sources in Tunis also reported British infantry training exercises in the Cyrenaican Desert have been cancelled. All planes at United States and British air bases in Libya have been grounded since the coup.

The Libyan news agency reported air force planes were flying constant patrols over the country's oil installations after anti-British demonstrations broke out Wednesday night.

Egypt's Middle East news agency said the demonstrations followed reports that King Idris had asked for British military help to try to regain his throne.

Israeli Raid Kills Five In Lebanon

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli troops crossed into southern Lebanon today and raided a small village, the army said.

Four Israeli soldiers were wounded and at least five Lebanese were killed in the 1½-hour raid, which began at midnight Thursday night, a spokesman said.

The army said 12 buildings in the village of Halda, two miles inside Lebanon, were destroyed.

The invading force had instructions not to harm civilians, but apparently it encountered some opposition.

Federation Chiefs Call Emergency Session

Oil Strike Move Splits Labor

VANCOUVER (CP)—A simmering dispute within the British Columbia labor movement over conduct of the 15-week oil workers strike boiled over here Thursday.

The B.C. Federation of Labor called its 20-member executive council into emergency session Thursday night to discuss the action of the Oil, Atomic and Chemical Workers Union in defying the federation by appearing before the B.C. Mediation Commission in a bid to end the strike against six major oil companies in the Lower Mainland.

And the oil union, a federation affiliate, sent a telegram to the parent Canadian Labor Congress demanding that the federation be instructed to stop interfering in the union's autonomous affairs.

The federation has ordered its member oganization to refrain from appearing before the commission as a protest against B.C. Labor legislation.

Earlier Thursday, the independent Teamsters Union announced it was delaying earlier announced plans to ban what it called the "hot" products of the six companies—Imperial, Shell, Standard, Home, Texaco and Gulf — pending the outcome of the commission hearings.

Ray Haynes, federation secretary - treasurer said the teamsters' action is "calculated to bolster the sagging mediation commission" and "aid the Social Credit government."

The federation supported the New Democratic Party during the recent B.C. general election.

Mr. Haynes said that all through the strike Teamster drivers had been using hot fuel in their trucks and had been delivering hot gasoline through an arrangement with non-union drivers.

★ ★ ★

Last week the Teamsters announced its members would not operate any equipment using hot fuel from the struck companies.

Thursday, Teamster President Ed Lawson said the edict was being withdrawn for the time being "in view of the publicly - announced intention of the oilworkers union to appear and present its case to the mediation commission."

He said the action had been requested by the oilworkers.

★ ★ ★

The commission hearing was adjourned Thursday to Monday after R. T. Philp, representing the oilworkers, said the union was not ready to proceed.

A spokesman for the companies said the firms would agree to the adjournment provided the union guaranteed to cease illegal picketing and stop incidents such as rock-

Bernadette Says Barricades Stay

BELFAST (AP) — Bernadette Devlin returned to Londonderry's Bogside Thursday after her American tour and announced: "The barricades stay up until the (Northern Ireland) government comes down."

Bernadette was smuggled in from the Irish Republic, avoiding the police and military whom she says, may want to arrest her.

In a bar inside the barricaded Bogside the 22-year-old Roman Catholic civil rights activist told reporters that money she raised in the United States will be available for the relief of families made homeless in last month's Catholic-Protestant riots as soon as it can be transferred from American banks.

Petition Urges New 1A Route

Highway 'Bloodshed Sickening'

By NANCY BROWN

Sickened by bloodshed on highway 1A through View Royal, 500 residents have petitioned for a new road capable of handling the heavy traffic which uses the highway daily.

However, Highways Minister Wesley Black told them that, while he agrees traffic is heavy, he will make no commitment about future plans.

Petition organizer Nicola Eremita, 348 Island Highway, said Thursday, he is far from satisfied with the minister's reply.

"We have had some terrible accidents on this road. Last year two small boys were killed. Not too long ago another young person was killed when his car left the highway and hit a pole.

★ ★ ★

"The bloodshed here is just sickening, and I dread what might happen next when I watch the children walking to school on that narrow road, without even a sidewalk."

Mr. Eremita suggested that a new road could be built running beside the E and N Railway from the bottom of the Four-Mile Hill to the Thetis underpass.

In the petition, he said "the number of accidents on this roadway, many of which are probably unreported and do not come to the notice of your department, is unbelievably high."

The petition asked for particular attention to the Four-Mile Hill, which is narrow and curved.

"This section for many years past has been considered highly dangerous, and it is in order to rectify this situation that the petitioners have asked me to present this petition," he said in the letter.

★ ★ ★

"Within the past year two school children have been killed on this highway at this particular point and a number of adults also have lost their lives due to the narrow curving road and the absence of a sidewalk."

Mr. Eremita pointed out that there are two school zones on the highway.

Replying to the petition, Highways Minister Black conceded that traffic counts have been fairly heavy in recent years on the highway, particularly on weekends.

"When the new Trans-Canada Highway section between Victoria and Goldstream was opened, traffic on 1A dropped to half of what it had been originally," he said.

"It is true, however, that it has increased considerably since that time."

Recreation Vote Again

Oak Bay Bid: Small Outlay, Big Dividends

If taxpayers approve, Oak Bay could get an ice arena, swimming pool, library and senior citizens centre for next to nothing, Mayor Fred Hawes said Thursday.

A referendum on the recreation centre, which will cost $1,250,000 to build, will be held probably in December, he added.

A firm date will be set at the next council meeting Sept. 22.

Mayor Hawes said he expects the needed money will be raised from the sale of municipally owned land.

INTEREST RATES

A previous referendum was defeated in April 1964, and Mayor Hawes blamed its failure on high interest rates and the large amount of money to be borrowed.

Land has already been acquired for a senior citizens centre and branch library near Oak Bay Avenue between Monterey and Hampshire, and an ice arena and swimming pool is planned off Foul Bay Road behind a new shopping centre.

It is expected at least $1,000,000 will be raised from the sale of land at Cedar Hill Cross Road, zoned for highrise and apartment development after a stormy public hearing earlier this year.

CASE DISMISSED

The zoning was challenged in a Supreme Court case brought by Oak Bay Ratepayers' president Conrad Watling and Percival Bragg, 3544 Henderson. The case was dismissed.

The municipality also owns other land, which will be sold to offset the building costs, Mayor Hawes said.

Mayor Hawes said it may not be necessary to put a money referendum to the taxpayers, but he feels they should be able to express their opinion on whether or not the money should be used for recreation.

Warm Pictures Of Emily Carr

By BILL THOMAS

Emily Carr and her painting companion Edythe Hembroff-Schleicher enjoyed the same talents. Both women painted and both were able writers.

Mrs. Schleicher has demonstrated her talents in a book published Thursday. She is being honored with an exhibition, which opened the same day, at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria showing a broad spectrum of her work as an artist.

In her book M.E., A Portrayal of Emily Carr, Mrs. Schleicher has made no attempt at an analysis of the art of Emily Carr but has rather concentrated on the warm and close relationship the two women enjoyed starting in the spring of 1930.

★ ★ ★

The title M.E. is taken from the signature Emily Carr frequently used to sign her paintings. Asked by the author what the M stood for, Emily Carr replied "it doesn't stand for anything. I was born just plain Emily. But because I had two sisters who were both Es (Edith and Elizabeth) I added the M to distinguish myself from them."

This is a thoroughly feminine book that shows some of the personality of British Columbia's foremost female painter.

★ ★ ★

Emily Carr had trouble meeting her payments on her sewing machine. She had small vanities—she wanted a fresh dress when the two women were doing portraits of each other. She had a passion for her pets and she couldn't suffer fools.

The fact that Mrs. Schleicher is a talented painter and her abilities were recognized and appreciated by Emily Carr give the episodes and insights a weight that lifts them above mere trivia and nostalgia.

M.E. will undoubtedly be treasured by art historians of the future who want to know what the painter was "really like." It was natural that Emily Carr should be interested in a young woman who had studied at the same schools as she but it is remarkable, in the light of Emily's personality, that the relationship lasted.

★ ★ ★

The book also includes a series of letters from Emily Carr to Mrs. Schleicher marking the first time any of the letters have been published.

M.E. contains some interesting word pictures of the older woman sitting surrounded by great trees sitting back smoking a cigarette, meditating and plotting her work.

The book is not an attempt at history, it is rather a warm personal account of the details in this great woman's life during the years of a close working relationship.

★ ★ ★

Much of the book was written at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria while Mrs. Schleicher did volunteer work Saturday mornings.

The exhibition of Mrs. Schleicher's work includes some of her early prize-winning paintings and also a portrait of Emily Carr. There is an interesting oil showing the painter of her caravan, which she called Elephant, and her small menagerie.

★ ★ ★

M.E. is an important book artistically but yet more important it is thoroughly readable. It will be readily appreciated by all those who knew Emily Carr and by those who have come to know her through her work.

Three-Car Crash

Death Raises Road Toll to 13

Greater Victoria suffered its thirteenth traffic fatality of the year Thursday when a passenger in a car involved in a three-car collision at Rose and Bay died.

Mrs. Florence Rutley, 69, of 406-905 Burdett, died a few hours after she was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital suffering internal injuries and shock.

She had been a passenger in a car driven by her husband, John, 65, when the car collided with a pickup truck driven by 17-year-old Robert Justice of 7365 Seabrook, Central Saanich, just before 4 p.m.

The Rutley car had been travelling south on Rose Street and the Justice vehicle was moving west on Bay Street.

After the truck was in collision with the Rutley car it careened left and struck a car driven by Mrs. Phyllis Patterson of 2201 Chambers. The Patterson vehicle was stopped at Rose while travelling east on Bay.

Mrs. Rutley, who had been confined to a wheelchair for several years with arthritis, is survived by her husband.

The truck was a total loss and the Rutley car suffered damages of about $1,500. The Patterson vehicle suffered minor damages.

Reward: Watch It Work

Apprentices at the Fleet School at Esquimalt got their reward for good work Thursday when they watched children at the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children using therapeutic equipment built for the clinic by the apprentices.

Lt.Cmdr. Bruce Wilson and seven of the trainees culminated their project for the clinic by meeting and helping the children work with badly-needed equipment.

The clinic, which was built mainly by personal contributions and pledges, lacked funds for specialized equipment. The Fleet School volunteered to build some of the equipment, and collected donations from ships and shore establishments in the area and civilian personnel at HMC Dockyard.

One of the projects was a manually-operated therapeutic treadmill to help children walk.

A logic circuit game made of eight electronically controlled and different colored boxes with blocks to fit the appropriate holes was a second project. When the blocks are properly placed, a tape recorder plays a tape encouraging the child.

A jungle gym made of ramps, steps, tunnels and ladders was the third piece of equipment made by the Fleet School.

The equipment was ready when the clinic opened, but most of the trainees hadn't had the opportunity to see it in action.

"They wanted to meet the children who will be using it," Cmdr. Wilson said.

Building materials for the machines only came to $800, and $1,200 was collected during the fund drive, so the Fleet School presented the remaining $400 to the clinic two weeks ago, Cmdr. Wilson said.

RCMP Witness

Lawyers Clash Over Testimony

By ALAN ANDERSON

Counsel for defence and prosecution clashed in Victoria provincial Court Thursday over the testimony of RCMP Constable Gerald O'Neil, who was giving evidence about a narcotics squad raid on a party in a Gorge Road home.

"I'm not getting the full story from you. I want all the evidence," said defence lawyer Robert Price to the constable.

Special prosecutor E. S. Pollard rose to object. "That kind of remark is not called for," he said.

TWO OCCASIONS

"I'm afraid it is," retorted Mr. Price. "I have found with this witness before now that all the evidence does not come out.

"Your Honor will remember on at least two occasions, not very far back, that this man did not give all the evidence until he was brought to do so under cross examination, and because of that the case was dismissed."

Judge Ostler allowed the questioning to proceed, and Mr. Price turned back to Constable O'Neil.

ANSWER REQUESTED

"Now, sir. Will you answer my question, please?"

"Will you repeat it?" asked the witness.

"If you would only listen, I wouldn't have to," said Mr. Price.

The questioning concerned the way in which the RCMP officers obtained a piece of evidence — a pipe, which they said contained hashish — in the case against Richard E. Shaw, who was charged with possession of narcotics.

SHAW'S HOME

Constable O'Neil had testified that he and Constable George Kuich went to the front door of Shaw's home at 12 Gorge Road West at 10 p.m. July 14, while a third RCMP officer went to the back door.

In the living room among a number of other people he saw Shaw sitting with a pipe in his hand, and he walked over and held out his hand. He said Shaw put the pipe into his hand, but then tried to take it back again.

"What did you do then?" asked Mr. Price. "Was that when the physical violence occurred?"

"I don't consider it physical violence. I protected the exhibit, that's all," replied the constable.

"You shoved him into a chair so hard you broke the chair and knocked a hole in the wall, didn't you?"

"Yes," replied the constable.

"And you don't call that physical violence?"

AFTER PAUSE

After a pause, the constable replied: "I don't know how to describe physical violence."

"Perhaps you should," said Mr. Price.

The prosecutor objected to that remark, and it was at this point that the two lawyers skirmished over Mr. Price's line of questioning.

When he returned to the constable, Mr. Price dropped the "physical violence" issue and asked whether the constable had agreed to pay for the damage caused in Shaw's home.

PAYMENT WANTED

The constable said he did not remember saying that, agreed that Shaw had later come to see him about payment, and he had told him to see senior RCMP officers about it.

Asked what their search of the house had uncovered, Const. O'Neil said: "Drugwise, only the pipe." He said if there had been liquor in the house, he would not have paid attention to it.

He described Shaw's behavior as "jovial, the way people get when they're high."

TESTIMONY DIFFERS

Constable Kuich's testimony differed from Constable O'Neil's in several details.

He said Const. O'Neil had taken the pipe away from Shaw, not had it handed to him.

He said Shaw had not been "jovial," and that he had been upset over the way the police had entered the house.

"He wanted to know why we hadn't shown a search warrant, kept saying 'what's happened to justice' and things like that."

The case will be resumed Sept. 17 for testimony from Henry Ho, food and drug director in Vancouver.

Anglers Presumed Drowned

The search for two men missing off the coast of Sooke since Monday was abandoned Thursday afternoon and Sooke RCMP said the men were presumed drowned.

The men were identified as R. D. Polson, 34, of 2269 Newman, and Able Seaman Z. G. Smith, 20, of 5094 Wesley.

Mr. Polson was a maintenance man with School District 61 and Mr. Smith served aboard HMCS St. Croix.

The two were reported missing Monday evening when they failed to return to the resort they had left at 4 p.m. for a few hours fishing.

A 12-foot aluminum skiff, believed to belong to the men, was found floating upside down in a kelp bed near Whiffin Spit Tuesday, but officials said there was no indication of what might have happened.

Extortion Case Hearing Delayed Indefinitely

Harold Reksten, 31, will not appear in court in the foreseeable future to answer an extortion charge brought against him a month ago.

★ ★ ★

In Provincial Court Thursday, the prosecution asked for a stay of proceedings because Reksten has been certified and sent to a mental hospital.

Reksten, the holder of a Norwegian passport, was charged Aug. 2 with attempting to extort $120,000 from Douglas J. Remery, 3215 Ripon.

He was arrested when Oak Bay police went with Remery to a rendezvous with Reksten in Windsor Park, and the next day he attempted suicide by slashing his wrists in his jail cell.

Reksten was held under guard in St. Joseph's Hospital until Aug. 7, when he was remanded to Riverview Mental Hospital for one month for a medical report.

The stay of proceedings allows the prosecution to reopen the case later—or, at its discretion, to drop the charges.
